Yanks Lead Reds In Third, 3-0

PEARSON AND WALTERS HURL SECOND GAME

Nationals Embark on 'Now-or-Never' Attempt to Stay in Running for Laurels.

M'KECHNIE CONFIDENT

Holds No Regrets for 2 to 1 Defeat in Series Opener at N. Y. Stadium.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—Scoring three times in the third inning, the Yankees took a 3 to 0 lead in their quest for their second straight victory over the Reds in the World series today.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK — A string-bean right-hander who throws a ball that sinks like an eagle swooping for the kill pitches against the New York Yankees today in a now-or-never attempt to keep the Cincinnati Reds in the running for the world championship of baseball.

All of Cincinnati's hopes and plenty of its money are riding today on the right arm of Bucky Walters, top pitcher of the National league—a sort of lonely policeman charged with the task of keeping the Yankees from committing assault and battery, murder and larceny of the bases.

If he fails, then the Reds will fail, for they will have to head for the hills of home tonight, two games behind and with their two best pitchers defeated.

Manager Joe McCarthy, eager for a quick kill, called on Monte Pearson to do the slinging for the Yankees.

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Reds, comes back to the wars today, confident and with no regrets about what happened yesterday when 58,000 persons saw his team lose, 2-1. It was anybody's ball game until one man was out in the last half of the ninth.

Then Yankee power broke loose like flood waters breaching a dam. Charlie Keller, a freshman who learned his Yankee lessons quickly, belted a tremendous triple to right center.

Paul Derringer, decided to walk Joe DiMaggio and take a chance with Bill Dickey. Dickey did the damage, slashing a single to center that sent Keller across with the winning run.

The probable line-ups for today's game:

Reds.	Yankees.
Werber, 3b	Crosetti, ss
Frey, 2b	Rolfe, 3b
Goodman, rf	Keller, rf
McCormick, 1b	DiMaggio, cf
Lombardi, c	Dickey, c
Craft, cf	Selkirk, lf
Berger, or	Gordon, 2b
Gamble, lf	Dahlgren, 1b
Myers, ss	Pearson, p
Walters, p

Play by Play

FIRST INNING

SECOND INNING

YANKS—Dickey was called out on strikes. Selkirk singled to center, but was out trying to stretch it, Craft to Myers. Gordon flied to Craft. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

THIRD INNING

REDS—Berger lined to Selkirk. Myers called out on strikes. Walters bounced to Rolfe. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKS — Dahlgren got a ground rule double. Pearson sacrified Dahlgren to third, Walters to Frey. Crosetti grounded out, Myers to McCormick, Dahlgren scoring. Rolfe singled. Keller doubled, Rolfe scoring. DiMaggio's slow roller down the third base line went for a hit, Keller moving to third, Dickey singled to right, scoring Keller and sending DiMaggio to third. Selkirk grounded out, Frey to McCormick. Three runs, five hits, no errors, two left.

U. S. Army 'Invades' Mansfield for Day

If Johnny ever takes his gun and goes marching off to war again it probably won't be afoot but in motorized equipment such as these, shown above, which were part of the 7th Cavalry Brigade, Fort Knox, Ky., and which stopped in Mansfield yesterday noon. Major E. N. Harmon rode in the car at the head of the line, as it came over Ashland road and Park avenue east. Center left, Major Harmon addressing the crowd at Central park. Center right, four pieces of Mansfield's own Battery D field guns lined up at the west side of the park. Bottom, armored car.

Modern Army on Wheels Would Have Made Grandpa's Eyes Pop

Mechanized war equipment which is dear to the hearts of German's war lords, was exhibited in Mansfield yesterday when a detachment of the 7th Cavalry brigade, Camp Knox, Ky., stopped here long enough for the begrimed and prespiring young soldiers to crawl out of armored cars and tanks for a breath of fresh air and sunshine.

Entirely mechanized, the equipment in the detachment was something that would have made Grandpa, who carried a muzzleloader at Vicksburg, and hopped over cannon balls at Gettysburg, open his eyes in bewilderment.

Moving on rubber tires and the bullet-proof tanks on "caterpillar" treads, the parade of motorized vehicles and men stopped at Central park.

Grandpa would have looked curiously at the low, formidable tanks which can "dish it out as well as take it;" at the armored and combat cars, with powerful field guns, and the 75 millimeter Howitzers which are capable of sending death roaring across cities and towns.

And looking at those speedy motorcycles and scout cars, Grandpa would probably mutter in his beard: "If Phil Sheridan had only had one of those Iron Horses, it wouldn't of made a dang bit of difference if he WAS 20 miles away."

Proponents Claim Doubtful Votes Won Over Through Texan's Arguments.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Sen. John H. Overton, (D., La.) broke with his southern Democratic colleagues to demand today that the senate refuse the administration's request for repeal of the arms embargo section of the neutrality act.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—Reliable administration sources said today that 61 senate votes have been pledged for President Roosevelt's neutrality program.

That figure was based on an informal poll conducted by Democratic senate leaders and was said to show 29 senators for the isolationist bloc and five as "doubtful."

Isolationists disputed that claim. Sen. Gerald P. Nye, R., N. W., a leader of those opposed to repeal of the arms embargo, said his group had secured pledges of more than 30 senators and eventually "would win the fight."

The senate begins the third day of debate today on the bill that would lift the embargo on arms, ammunition and instruments of war and set up a take-title-and-carry plan for all exports.

Sens. Tom Connally, D., Tex., and Arthur H. Vandenberg, R., Mich., spoke yesterday. Connally urged adoption of the administration's program, contending that the present neutrality law leads to war. Vandenberg appealed to the senate not to make the United States an arsenal for European countries.

Meanwhile, the following developments in the controversy were recorded:

1. Vice President John N. Garner was reported authoritatively to have told friends that the neutrality issue should be disposed of before congress gives any thought to national defense.

2. Democratic leaders said they had sufficient votes to defeat a motion by Sen. Charles W. Tobey, R., N. H., to recommit the neutrality bill to the foreign relations committee. Tobey seeks to separate the em-

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa. — (AP) — Benjamin Franklin, 33, suspended Pennsylvania police corporal, was indicted on murder and involuntary manslaughter charges today in the slaying of 14-year-old Joan Stevens, Nesquehoning school girl, June 5.

District Attorney Albert Heimbach announced Franklin would be placed on trial Tuesday.

The Stevens girl was killed near her home while Franklin and Private Efward Swatji questioned her in their police car about a purported bank robbery scheme. Franklin contended he fired in self-defense when the girl yanked a pistol from her purse and threatened to "blow our brains out." The pistol proved to be a toy.

German high command reports "mopping up" east of Vistula in Poland and "limited artillery and airplane reconnaissance "activity" on western front.

Nazis profess belief Germany's position will be strengthened by Russia's diplomatic moves in Balkans.

ALLIES — Blockade against Germany reported increasingly successful, two U-boats said to have been driven into mine field and sunk; a German merchantman reported captured by French submarine. French report "intermittent artillery action" on western front after yesterday's victory of French over German tanks in Borg forest; French claim German air losses last month 30 planes to eight for France.

London hears that Turkey rejected Russian diplomatic attempts to assume dominating position in Balkans, specifically turning down Soviet demand that Dardanelles be closed to allied fleets.

GIRL LURED INTO CAR, UNHARMED

Middle-Aged Man Sought in 8th Case in 4 Months; Child Taken Into Country.

A middle-aged man who lured an eight-year-old girl into his automobile yesterday and released her unharmed on a country road three miles from the city, was the object of a police search today.

The case was the eighth of this nature in the last four months in the vicinity.

The girl, who said she was picked up on Bowman street near Springmill street, while on her way to school yesterday noon, was returned to Mansfield by a farmer who told Sheriff E. P. Long that she came to his home on Trimble road a half mile north of route 39 and sobbed out her story.

The sheriff was called by the farmer after he had taken the girl to her grandmother's home on Springmill street.

She said that while on her way back to Bowman street school a man in an "old coupe" drove up to her and told her to "get into the car."

The girl told the sheriff that she was driven into the country where the man forced her to get out of the machine and then drove away.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates and Sheriff Long believe he is the same man who lured five other young Mansfield girls and two Crestline girls into his machine during the past four months. They

STICKS TO STAND

'Hands Off' on Embargo Issue, Roosevelt to Go Home.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— President Roosevelt, emphasizing the White House "hands off" attitude in the congressional debate over repeal of the arms embargo, will leave today for a week-end at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said that senate leaders have informed Mr. Roosevelt there is no reason why he should not leave Washington over the week-end instead of staying here.

Since Mr. Roosevelt delivered his neutrality recommendations in a special congressional message, the White House has maintained an aloof attitude to congressional maneuvers in the crucial struggle.

REICHSTAG TO HEAR 'PEACE TERMS' FRIDAY

LEAVES FOR WARSAW

Chancellor Watches Triumphal Parade Through Poland's Surrendered Capital.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Germans pinned their peace hopes today on the possibility that Adolf Hitler's reichstag speech tomorrow would outline a basis on which hostilities might be ended.

The fuehrer was scheduled to speak at noon (6 a. m. EST) to the members of his completely submissive legislature, possibly to pronounce some new German attitude toward the western powers at war with Germany.

But what Hitler intended to say remained a profound official secret and in official circles it was emphasized that speculation on his speech was "hazardous and a disservice to everyone."

Hitler left for Warsaw this morning to review a triumphal parade by Nazi troops, according to informed sources.

His standard continued to fly from the chancellery—usually a sign of his presence in Berlin—but these sources said that merely meant he planned to be back before the day was over.

Draft of Speech Ready.

Tomorrow the fuehrer is scheduled to speak for one and three-fourths hours. It was stated the rough draft of the speech had been completed but changes were possible up to the last minute.

Observers seeking a hint of what German policy may be, knew that in quarters close to the foreign office there was dissatisfaction with the attitude of British Prime Minister Chamberlain and Lord Halifax, his foreign secretary.

(In speeches in parliament, Chamberlain declared Tuesday that "mere assurances from Germany" were not enough for Britain to halt hostilities and Halifax said yesterday there was "no more perilous proceeding than to negotiate under the threat of force.")

They knew also that from inspired sources have come repeated statements that "Germany is ready

SLAYER DOOMED

High Court Sets Chair Date for Ohio Farm Killer.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Barring executive clemency, Lafe Williams will go to the electric chair Oct. 25 to pay with his life for the slaying of Henry Graham on a Butler county farm in 1938.

The supreme court late yesterday denied Williams' appeal and set the execution date. The man was convicted of killing Graham, with whom he lived at the time of the crime, and robbing him of $38. Williams pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

In another case, the high tribunal refused to order the Portsmouth city council to accept petitions for a number of proposed charter amendments to be voted at the November election.

GYROS RECEIVE 'MANY HAPPY RETURNS' AT BIRTHDAY DINNER

"Many happy returns of the day" and best wishes for more birthdays were extended to the Mansfield Gyro club last night by other Ohio clubs and district and international officials of the organization, as the club marked its 15th anniversary of its founding with a dinner at Westbrook Country club.

Added to a 100 per cent attendance of Mansfield club were guests of members, former Gyros and delegations from Cleveland, Columbus and Dayton.

Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, who was a charter member of the Mansfield club, recalled some incidents of the early days —among them the 12-cyclinder car the club acquired to make a trip to the Denver convention, but had to give up because the car broke down on a little jaunt around Central park and the bowling team that won the international tournament.

"There was never any material gain from membership in Gyro," he said, "but there was an immeasurable gain in friendship, which cannot be measured by material standards.

Best wishes were extended to the Mansfield club by Glen Carmen, president of the Cleveland club, by Dr. Arthur Knoderer, of the Dayton club, and lieutenant-governor of Ohio and by Joseph Hirshberger, for the Columbus club. Hirshberger is a former district governor.

Ed L. Kagy, one of the three founders of Gyro and now international secretary-treasurer was the final speaker.

He urged the Mansfield club to carry on in the future as it has in the past 15 years, on the basis of friendship, the club's motto.

"The finest service is the giving and maintenance of friendship," Kagy said, "and the Mansfield club will prosper and grow if its members will pledge to each other an intelligent and tolerant understanding."

Earl B. Rawson, a charter member of the Mansfield club, and present secretary, introduced Kagy and Kalbfleisch. R. D. Lindsay, president of the club, presided.

Members and guests played golf in the afternoon, with prizes in the blind bogey tournament going to Dr. D. M. Leuthner, Mansfield guest and Harry O'Donnell, Cleveland, tied for first: Roy Brokaw, Columbus and Warrie Foden, Cleveland, tied for second, and G. E. Kalbfleisch and Dr. Frank Watson, tied for third.

ORGANIZE CLUB TO FIND JOBS

Cleveland Y. M. C. A. Develops System for Unemployed, Gets Rapid Results.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—The Young Men's Christian Association here has developed an organization of unemployed men who, in their quest for jobs for themselves, find work for each other.

The group, whose membership averages 600 to 800 men is directed by Victor Girfin, 56-year-old Y. M. C. A. employment chief who has been helping Y. M. C. A. men find jobs for 20 years.

Called the Job Finder's Club, the organization has obtained an average of 2,000 positions a year for the 3,500 to 3,700 men who seek Girfin's help annually in their hunt for work.

Girfin describes the club as a "cooperative group of job hunters who buoy the spirits of each other and themselves by helping the other fellow all the time.

Jobs usually obtained by leads found in the job seekers' daily search are clerical, sales, office, stenographic, bookkeeping and accounting and sometimes skilled machinists. Applicants are high school graduates and sometimes college graduates with special training.

During the winters, the club holds monthly meetings, always attended by some employed men and usually by a few employers. Here the members, with 150 to 200 participating, discuss their problems and exchange ideas.

A former member, who has risen to success, presides at the meetings.

Girfin says the club was founded because of the axiom that "necessity is the mother of invention." It was in March, 1931, at the ebb of the depression that a group of idle work seekers were in Girfin's office discussing the futility of their search.

Kentucky Senator?

Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky, above, looms as the successor to the late Senator M. M. Logan who died suddenly in Washington. It was predicted that Chandler will resign as governor and be succeeded by Keen Johnson, Kentucky's present lieutenant-governor. Chandler, political circles say, would then be appointed senator.

AGE AND YOUTH SEEN AT ODDS

Illinois Economist Foresees Approach of Class Struggle By 1980.

CHAMPAIGN-URBANA, Ill. — (U.P.)—Dr. Frank S. Dickinson, University of Illinois economist, foresees the approach of a class struggle between age and youth.

He said in an address before the Western Underwriters' association at White Sulphur Springs, Va., that the "war of the pensionnaires" would unfold as a problem "far more demanding" than the oft-discussed conflict between capital and labor.

Dr. Dickinson said the decreasing birth rate and the increasing life span were causes behind the "struggle of classes in America." But he said he does not expect the struggle to become critical until 1980, when, he estimated, there will be 35,000,000 persons in the U. S. more than 65 years of age.

He visioned as possible results of what he predicted would be "the greatest cultural and social change since the fall of Rome" the following:

Pension-taxation claiming one-fourth the income of workers and employers.

Destruction of the two major political parties.

Control by the "hand that rocks the rocking-chair."

GALION — Mrs. B. E. Harter was dismissed from the Good Samaritan hospital Wednesday.

Bootleggers Pick Up Points From Army and Navy.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(U.P.)—Columbia bootleggers are picking up a few pointers from the army and navy.

When the officers were within 75 feet of their quarry, a heavy smoke screen was released from the car under suspicion. The smoke covered the pursuing car with a heavy oil, delaying the chase and blocking all traffic within a block.

The constabulary disclosed that another car equipped to lay down a smoke screen has been seized in Columbia.

MESSENGER SERVICE FOR INMATES, IT'S ODD BUT PAYING OCCUPATION

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(U.P.)—Albert Red Collier has gone back to the city and county jails—because that's how he makes his living.

Collier, who takes messages from prisoners and delivers them to their families and friends, makes two or three visits to the jails daily, and charges 25 to 50 cents per message, depending upon the distance he must travel to deliver them.

He started out as a messenger boy for telegraph companies. He observed how persons in jail were always attempting to get in touch with relatives and friends, and it gave him an idea. From this his messenger service was born.

He has been at it 12 years now, except for two years when he was in the army and served in Hawaii, and he averages about $12 a week.

At first he used a bicycle, but he has graduated to an automobile, with a likeness of himself painted on the side. The sign on the side of his car reads: "Red, the Messenger Boy."

"Red" doesn't think his new sign will help business much, because most of his customers can't read the sign. There's not much opportunity for expansion, either, he observes, unless more people get in jail.

However, Collier says, business is pretty stable and as long as he has no competition, he can make a fairly comfortable living for himself and his wife.

But even this business has its risks, and few of Collier's customers have the money to pay for a message, or, if they have, the money is usually not where they can get it.

So much of his business must be done on credit, and some of the customers never pay.

"What else can you expect from folks in jail?" he asks.

STOPS WEDDING

Neighbor Halts Ceremony With Cry of 'Fire.'

LIVERMORE, Cal.—(U.P.)—That little, and apparently useless, warning which the marrying minister always gives to the effect that if anyone knows any reason why the wedding should not proceed "to state them now or forever hold their peace," is not always as superfluous as it may seem.

The officiating minister at the wedding of Miss Bertha Carlson and Milton Fisher had just reached that point, when a neighbor poked his head in the door and announced that there certainly were reasons why the ceremony should not proceed.

"The house is on fire," he declared.

CLAY BUTTON FOUND

AUBURN, N. Y.—(U.P.)—While setting out plants in her garden, Mrs. Myra V. Brown of Lodi, dug up an old campaign button with the name of Henry Clay, 1845, on its face. The 94-year-old button was in an excellent state of preservation.

SAYS RICHLAND SETTING PACE IN LATEST UPSWING

WPA Official in Address Here Asserts Industrial Pick-up Tops 20-County District.

The industrial upswing which has resulted in a shortage of labor for WPA is more marked in Richland than in any other of the 20 counties in this district, according to James L. Kelley, director of district six of WPA in Ohio.

Addressing members of the Mansfield Public Parks association at their annual dinner meeting at Prospect park last night, Kelley asserted that only 15 per cent of the men receiving assignments to WPA projects in Richland county were reporting for work.

Springfield, he said, was next, to Mansfield in the business recovery that has been noted by the lack of men to man projects.

"That is a grand sign," he said, "but the upswing has not had nearly the effect that we expected."

He pointed out that of the 17,000 workers on WPA in the 20-county district, only 488 had returned to private employment during September.

Cites Biggest Turnover.

Kelley told the group that the largest turnover in WPA rolls was in the age group between 25 and 40 years.

"The men above 40 are not yet needed in industry and those under the age of 25 are inexperienced," he said.

In citing work done in Mansfield by the WPA, the director said that $1,900,000 in projects had been received here since August, 1935. Of that amount the city and the county spent only $326,000, he added.

"Upon the completion of the present parks rehabilitation project, $147,000 will have been spent on city parks which cost the city a little more than $25,000," Kelley said.

He lauded the different park associations for their co-operative spirit in maintaining and improving the parks and the civic award made to Liberty Park association two years ago by the Chamber of Commerce for outstanding work in the community.

Kelley was introduced by Henry G. Brunner, president of the city board of park commissioners who spoke only briefly in reviewing the work of the part commission.

William Spriggins, recently elected president of the association, was installed succeeding Roy Vaughn, who has headed the organization for the past year. Other officers installed were Walter E. Hahne, vice-president, Edward Wylie, secretary, and Floyd Fighter, treasurer.

DEAD MAN WINS CAR AT DRAWING

BRIDGEPORT, Conn.— (U.P.) — Drawings were being held for two new cars at St. Ann's Carnival. The name of Frank Sopos was called as the winner of one of the machines.

Nobody answered. The name was called again. Still no answer.

Then somebody explained Sopos' absence. He was killed in an automobile accident a week before.

MISSES TRIAL, CELL LOCK JAMS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(U.P.) — Police had to take a cold chisel and hammer to get E. N. Walker out of jail. Walker was charged with disorderly conduct, but couldn't appear before Judge John B. Scott because the lock on his cell would not work.

Police finally cut the lock, but it was too late for that day's session and the case was re-set.

THEATERS

WHAT WITH ALL the war talk and the possibility of America being involved in it, the Marx Brothers next picture should be welcomed with open arms. "A Day at the Circus" is about ready for release and is reported to have more than the usual number of daffy episodes and gags. As a special treat there will be one of Chico's piano numbers in which he starts out playing a symphonic number and ends up with the Beer Barrel Polka. Kenny Baker, who with Florence Rice carries the romantic thread, sings several solos and Harpo performs his miracle with the harp. The Marxes romp with the animals of the circus and use the funny ones to build up the comedy. It's their first picture in a year and a half.

Dartmouth Scenes.

The 1939 winter carnival of Dartmouth college is the theme around which the story of "Winter Carnival" was written, and the action of the story is such as to include the actual scenes taken at Dartmouth without interrupting the main story. An interesting phase of the picture is that the story and musical score were both written by Dartmouth men. The red-headed Texas "Ooomph" girl, Ann Sheridan, and Richard Carlson enact the socitey girl-professor romance. The picture will be shown at the Ohio on Friday only.

Woman as a Judge.

Beautiful Frieda Inescort, who began her career as private secretary to Lady Nancy Astor and Novelist Louis Bromfield, plays the title role in "A Woman Is the Judge," which the Madison shows tomorrow only. Miss Inescort plays a woman judge who steps down from the bench and resigns at the height of her career in order to defend her daughter (Rochelle Hudson) against a murder charge. Otto Kruger plays the part of the prosecuting attorney.

English Mystery.

Basil Rathbone and Richard Greene, both Englishmen, play the leading roles in the English mystery "The Hound of the Baskervilles," which is on the Ritz screen menu today and the remainder of the week. Rathbone plays the great detective, Sherlock Holmes, while Greene plays the young Sir Henry Baskerville whose life is endangered by the phantom hound killer. Wendy Barrie is the girl. The second feature is Gene Autry in "Mountain Rhythm."

From Villain to Hero.

Brian Donlevy, who makes a fascinating screen villain, leaves the ranks of villainy in "Behind Prison Gates" to become a heroic investigator from the district attorney's office, who takes up a new name and personality and gets himself sentenced to prison in order to get evidence in a bank robbery case. Jacqueline Wells appears opposite him. This film will be the Majestic attraction tomorrow and Saturday. Also shown will be a Western, "Riders of Black River," with Charles Starrett.

Mystery at Park.

A mystery story which keeps the audience guessing until the final fade out is told in "Murder Is News," at the Park. The story gets under way when a columnist reporter is called by telephone and told that he will get a big news story by coming to a certain night club. When he arrives he finds the body of a wealthy business man, and from then on there is suspense until the mystery is solved. "Beware of Ladies" with Donald Cook and Judith Allen is the second film.

COLUMBUS—Sunday will be "Appreciation Day" at Red Bird Stadium when the Columbus Bullies, tied for second place in the American Professional Football league, meet the famed Los Angeles Bulldogs, possibly for the loop title.

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—Lyn Lary, former Cleveland Indians' shortstop, was remarried yesterday to Mrs. Mary Lawlor Lary, former Broadway singer from whom he was divorced Jan. 29. Lary played with the St. Louis Cardinals this season.

Reds Pin Victory Hopes on Bucky Walters Today

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL

THE name of thirty-four-year-old "Red" Ruffing will be inscribed in the world series records as the winner of the first game of the current baseball classic, but a couple of nifty infielders who answer to the names of Joe Gordon and Frank Crosetti probably had more to do with the 2 to 1 Yankee victory than any of the Manhattanites.

Judging from the reports on the opening game in Yankee Stadium, the second base pair covered their sector like molasses does a pancake.

A slip by either Gordon or Crosetti in any one of six innings might have turned the conflict into a victory for the Reds, who were credited with only four hits, but had as many stolen from them by the Maginot Line defense erected by the two Yankees.

FRANK CROSETTI

Six times Gordon and Crosetti figured in plays that robbed the Ohioans of what might have developed into scoring opportunities.

In the second inning after Frank McCormick singled, Gordon pulled off a slick pivot job on a double play engineered by Red Rolfe on Ernie Lombardi's grounder.

Bill Myers gave the Reds hopes in the third when he singled, but he was erased when Crosetti turned Paul Derringer's roller into a twin killing.

The fifth frame saw Gordon start the third Yankee double play on Bill Myers' grounder after Harry Craft singled. Then in the sixth Crosetti went back of second to throw Derringer out at first. Gordon did the same thing on Wally Berger's smash in the eighth.

Another beautiful play was pulled off by Crosetti in the ninth when he raced to the infield grass and tossed out Berger while on the run.

The Yankees may not possess the same brand of pitching that is included in the Cincinnati corps, but the New York club, apparently, can get by with what it has in the way of slingers as long as Crosetti and Gordon are on hand.

Yesterday's defeat doesn't necessarily mean that the Yanks are "in," but the first game winner obtains an advantage that is difficult to beat in a short series.

However, there is a suspicion in this writer's head that the Reds are still capable of taking the Yanks in the series. This may sound ridiculous, we admit, but stranger things have happened.

* * *

Get our your 1940 calender, if you have one, mark a big red circle around April 27, because that's going to be a "red letter" day in Mansfield. That's the date that has been selected for the 14th Mansfield Relays.

Dickey Clouts 'Beaut'

Says His Game-Winning Single Made Off Perfect Pitch on Inside Corner.

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK —(INS)— Two clubhouses . . . Yanks and Reds . . . Joy versus Gloom . . . game over, Yanks come tearing in . . . laughing, singing . . . soon a dozen are under the showers . . . all warbling . . . with Tommy Henrich turning on a nice tenor . . . and plenty of water. . . .

Charley Ruffing . . . sitting quietly in front of locker . . . and showing stone bruise on left hand . . . "Bill Dickey had more stuff out there than I did," he explains the bruise . . . "Yeh, I think the Reds have more power than the Cubs had last year . . . My arm was sore so I pulled the string on my fast one a lot . . . I think Monte (Pearson) will take them in the second game. . . ."

* * *

Lou Gehrig comes over . . . says nothing but shakes hands with Dickey . . . Dickey says "Thanks, Lou," . . . Just as if Lou had made a long speech. . . .

* * *

Dickey says his game-winning single was made off a perfect pitch just on the inside corner . . . all the Yanks are loud in their praise of Paul Derringer. . . . Red Rolfe sums it all up . . . "He's the best pitcher we ever saw in a World series . . . he sure doesn't give you any fast ones to hit. . . ."

Joe McCarthy, sitting off in his cubby hole of an office pulls a nifty. . . . "Best play of the game?" he echoed a query . . . "that's easy . . . it was Fletch (Art Fletcher, Yankee third base coach) sending Gordon in with that first run. . . ."

That, the Yanks all say, was one of the two plays that meant the ball game. . . . Gordon on first, and Dahlgreen doubles to left. . . Berger, a weak thrower, makes a good but weak return to second base . . . the normal play . . . Gordon rounds third and tears for the plate . . . Frey's relay is too high and to one side and Gordon slides under Lombardi . . . Gordon admits a perfect peg would have had him. . . .

Then the ninth . . . one down . . . and Young Charley Keller . . . hits a terrific liner to right center . . . Craft and Goodman both go after it . . . Goodman takes his eye off the ball for a minute as it nears the bleachers . . . then makes a left split-second lunge for it . . . and it drops safely . . . for an official triple . . . comes Dickey's hit after DiMaggio is purposely passed and the game is over. . . .

But over in the Reds' dressing room . . . where you could cut the gloom with a knife . . . Manager Bill McKechnie says . . . "Triple, hell . . . that ball should have been caught . . . Goodman took his eyes off it . . . anybody who says they can laugh off a defeat like that would be a liar. . . . it was a tough one to lose. . . ."

Poor Goodman sits in a corner . . . downcast . . . not saying a word . . . None of the Rds has much to say . . . we relay high praise from the Yanks to Derringer. . . . But the big fellow is disconsolate . . . "Great game," he repeats . . . "What was great about it? We lost didn't we and that's all that counts. . . ."

* * *

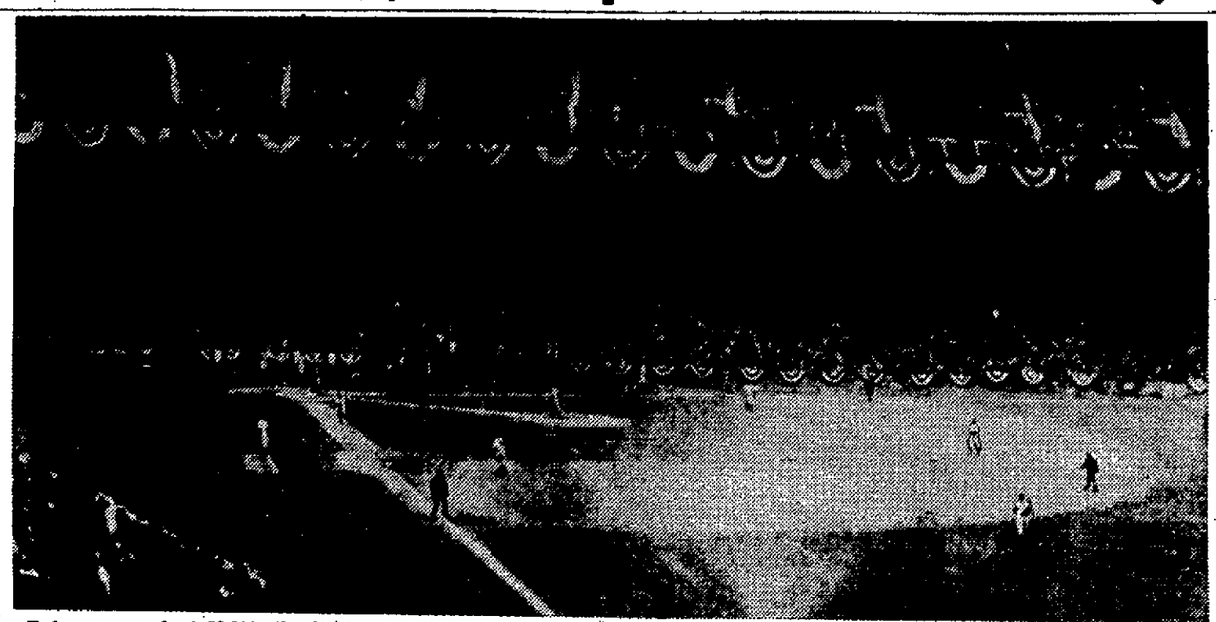
McKechnie isn't sure whether he'll keep Berger and his infected foot in the second game but predicts Bucky Walters will show the Yanks another game like Derringer showed them.

* * *

Over on the rubbing table . . . Big Frank McCormick . . . who got two of the Reds' four hits . . . says . . . "Let's forget that one. We'll get the next one. . . ."

And Old Al Simmons agrees . . . "Now, that's the way I like to hear a guy talk . . . Sure we'll get them. . . ."

Well, who knows, maybe they will at that. . . .



Before a crowd of 58,000, the Yanks and the Reds are shown above in the first game of the world series in New York. Cincinnati is at bat here. Ruffing let down the Reds with four hits. The Yanks won by a score of 2 to 1.

Snyder Pushes Bengal Squad For Next Foe

Cripples Return to Lineup for Saturday's Tilt at New Philly.

WITH THE SQUAD nearing peak shape physically and practice resulting in a strong pass defense, something that has been lacking, Mansfield high's Tygers appear to be ready for Saturday's engagement with the Quakers in New Philadelphia.

* * *

While victory hopes are not encouraging, Head Coach Paul Snyder is pleased with the way the club is shaping up for the coming tussle.

* * *

Virtuall all of the cripples will be ready for action Saturday, Snyder said. Joe Logan's ankle was injured more severely in the Massillon game than first believed, but he is expected to be able to return to the lineup.

The only Tyger not expected to see action is Bob Lantz, who underwent an operation on his arm at General hospital a week ago.

* * *

Operating more smoothly than they have any time this season at Cambridge, despite a slippery field, the Tygers are determined to register their third victory against New Philly.

* * *

However, the manner in which Snyder has worked his charges this week indicate that the coach believes the Tygers will be confronted by a stiff battle. The New Philadelphia club has class in every department.

Place Hopes On Two Rookies Today

ROCHESTER—(AP)—A pair of rookies held today the answer to the little world series clash between Rochester of the International League and Louisville of the American Association.

The Wings squared the 21st annual Junior classic last night with a 9 to 5 victory. Bud Parmalee was the losing hurler.

Supplies Book Canton Eleven For Next Game

McMullen's Men to Engage Neago Cafes Sunday at Blue Goose Field.

An aggregation composed of former high school and college gridders will offer the opposition for Coach Earl McMullen's undefeated Automotive Supplies at Blue Goose field Sunday.

The team is the Neago Cafe combine of Canton and it invades Mansfield with an impressive record dangling from its belt. The Canton outfit, which faces the Supplies at 2:30 p. m., is the 1938 Canton city champions.

* * *

Sporting a lineup which includes a number of erstwhile Canton high school stars, Canton will throw a club averaging 175 pounds against the Mansfield team.

* * *

While Coach McMullen is not familiar with the Cafe's offensive tactics he is sending his team through stiff workouts this week in anticipation of a tough battle. The Automotive club will be seeking its third straight win of the season.

Monte Pearson Yankee Choice

Berger's Wrong Throw-In Among Factors Which Contributed to Cincy's 2 to 1 Defeat.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—Those Yankees, possibly the greatest set of opportunists baseball has yet seen, are off and running again.

Victorious over the scrapping Cincinnati Reds, 2 to 1, in yesterday's tense opening battle of the world series, they go into the second contest at the Yankee stadium today almost prohibitive favorites to wrap up their fourth straight world championship.

That was the game the Reds needed. Paul Derringer nearly pitched his stout heart out, and his National league teammates fought to the last gasp before a friendly crowd of over 58,000. But in the end the great pitching of Red Ruffing and the timely swatting of the Yanks proved a little too much.

* * *

Even if Bucky Walters, their second fine pitcher, scores for the Reds today over the Yankees' Monte Pearson and squares the series, the Yankees still will have a big psychological edge as they go to Cincinnati to continue the clawing on Saturday. They have beaten Derringer, the man Bill McKechnie regarded as his ace, and they again proved that they can't be overcome by fine pitching alone.

* * *

Probing further into the opening thriller, though it was won by Bill Dickey's line single to center with Charley Keller on third base in the ninth, it was lost to the Reds when Wally Berger made the wrong throw-in from left field in the fifth frame, enabling Joe Gordon to score all the way from first on Babe Dahlgren's zipper down the line.

Bill Dickey

That one uncertain throw undid the splendid six-hit, seven-strikeout hurling of Derringer and put the big right-hander in a spot where, when the Yankees finally struck again in the ninth, he was trying to fight off the winning run instead of the tying one. He couldn't do it, and suffered his first loss in 11 starts.

Berger's arm is acknowledged to be the weakest link on the whole Cincinnati chain, but it is not certain he was responsible for the weird play that enabled the

Yanks to tie the score. Perhaps he only did as he was signaled. But here's what happened:

The Reds were ahead, 1 to 0, the result of a walk to Ival Goodman, his steal of second and Frank McCormick's hit through the infield—the 129th run of the year driven across by the first baseman. Derringer was wheeling them through in great style. In four innings he had given the Bombers only two hits and had whiffed four.

So, with one out in the fifth, Gordon lined a single to left. The next batter, Dahlgren, cracked one over the third bag that Bill Werber just failed to spear. It went to the boards and Berger fielded it smartly as Gordon tore between second and third. Then Berger lazily winged the pellet toward second, apparently hoping maybe to nab Dahlgren there.

Art Fletcher, coaching for the Yanks at third, saw instantly that the Reds hadn't arranged for a "cut-off" play, as he said later, and he waved the fleet Gordon on home. Linus Frey took Berger's heave, and apparently flustered at Gordon's daring, made a high peg to Ernie Lombardi at the plate as the Yankee slid into the pan.

Red Rolfe, first Yank up in the ninth, smashed one over first that McCormick fumbled but came up with in time to win a close decision. Keller, the rookie from Newark, then caught hold of one that went a mile high toward the 407-foot sign in right-center.

Goodman went after it from right, and so did Harry Craft from center. Both, playing in an unfamiliar park, appeared to be bothered by the possibility of crashing into the wall. They looked at the ball, then at the wall, as they sprinted desperately.

* * *

Goodman just reached it. At arm's length, the ball hit his glove and bounced off, and Keller easily reached third. It was scored a triple, though a lot of Yankee partisans felt that Joe DiMaggio would have had it in his pocket, being familiar with the park.

* * *

Derringer then purposely passed DiMaggio to set up a possible double play. Why he didn't also pass Dickey while he was about it, thus setting up a force play at home, has not been explained at this hour. For Dickey pumped a clean single into center that Craft fumbled and didn't even bother to recover, because Keller long since was across the plate and the crowd was leaving.

LITTLE WORLD SERIES

Rochester 9, Louisville 5.

Madison Faces Another Severe Test Against Orrville; Shelby at Bucyrus.

COACH AL FENDRICK and his Rams have a tough job cut out for themselves Friday night when Orrville invades Madison field.

The Rams, beaten by Crestline, 31 to 0, last week, face their second Class A foe in as many weeks, and Friday's game does not stack up as anything easy.

* * *

Orrville, coached by Harry Stroble, packs as much class as Crestline on a paper comparison and Fendrick and his Rams haven't quite forgotten that defeat.

* * *

There is a posibility that there will be a number of new faces in the starting lineup Friday as Fendrick was far from pleased with the way several of the first-string men performed against the Onondagas.

The Red Raiders showed to their best advantage of the season last week when they downed Coventry, 13 to 0, with their star halfback, Walt McKee, on the sidelines.

McKee injured a knee in the second game of the season, but he will be ready for action Friday, it was reported in Orrville today.

With Chatterelli, Bilderback and Seckel leading the attack in the absence of McKee, Orrville collected a total of 20 first downs against five for Coventry.

Coventry threatened only once. Bilderback fumbled when tackled in taking the kickoff and as the ball bounded away it was recovered by Coventry on the 19. But the Summit county lads got no farther than the 19, where they lost the ball on downs.

* * *

The Rams completed heavy work for the game, scheduled to start at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

* * *

Shelby plays at Bucyrus Friday night and it is favored to annex the N. C. O. conference game. Butler is to play the Mt. Vernon reserves, according to the schedule. Bellville performs at Loudonville today.

Gowdy Pitches Behind 'Guards

Draws Plaudets for Most Confused Costume.

By BILL WHITE

NEW YORK —(AP)— The less serious side of the series:

Some 58,000 saw the opener, but "Matilda and the kids" didn't. The Texan back of us explained to his neighbor, "I sent Matilda and the kids to the fair so junior and I could enjoy the game."

* * *

As far as the Yankees are concerned, there wasn't anything wrong with the picture—except the clock on the scoreboard. It was six minutes fast.

* * *

Although, he had a lot of high powered competition, old Hank Gowdy, the Red's coach, won the day's plaudits for confused costumes. When he pitched to the Reds in batting practice, he was equipped with aged shinguards and a first baseman's mitt.

* * *

* * *

The hot dog man couldn't even guess how many "franks" he and his staff of 500 would sell. He said he predicted an advance sale once and the revenue guys came around to collect on the guess, not the sales.

Helps Bishops

WALT ZIEGLER

One of the reasons for Ohio Wesleyan's comeback in football this fall is Walt Ziegler, former Mansfield high school star, who is a sophomore tackle on the Bishop varsity. He is a six-footer and weighs 195 pounds.

The Bishops have defeated Alma, 27 to 0, and Youngstown, 19 to 13, in opening games, and will meet DePauw Saturday afteronon at Delaware in what they hope to be their third straight win.

These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2% monthly on balances up to $300 and 6% yearly on balances over $300 to $500. TRADERS AWAIT HITLER'S TALK, MARKET QUIET

Metal Shares Fail to Improve as Scattered Groups Resist General Trend.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market pulled ahead a little today but the improvement didn't last long and some leaders slipped behind. The opening was quiet and business thereafter was at a slow rate.

Backward were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Anaconda, American Smelting, duPont, Union Carbide and New York Central.

Stocks resistant included Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric and Eastman Kodak.

Most traders, it was explained, were waiting for Hitler's speech, scheduled for tomorrow morning, to give them some clue as to how operations ought to go.

Analysts noted that as a result of the current industrial upturn, bituminous coal production in this country for the week ended Sept. 30 was the highest since Dec., 1937, according to the National Coal association. The estimate of 9,900,000 tons was based on incomplete carloadings figures.

TRUCKING HITS RECORD CLIP IN BUSINESS SPURT

Only 10 Years Old, It's Major Industry Here; 20 Lines Operate Out of City.

The long-distance trucking industry barely 10 years old, is rolling along with the business upturn to new highs in truck loadings and employment.

The growth of the industry in Mansfield has been so rapid in the past few years that no one person knows its magnitude in terms of valuation, employes, payrolls or tonnage hauled.

John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, believes a complete analysis of the trucking trade here will show it ranks as one of the city's foremost industries.

While none of the haulers have their home offices in Mansfield, 20 truck lines operate in and out of the city with several having terminals and docks here.

Far Cry From 10 Years Ago.

Ten years ago the longest haul in the motor cargo industry was between Mansfield and Cleveland. Today some companies operating out of Mansfield send their equipment as far as 2,000 miles away.

One freight manager who has grown up with the business in Mansfield ventured a guess as to the size of the industry here today.

He estimated that the 20 companies operate probably some 200 trucking units in and out of Mansfield every 24 hours and that the equipment is valued at "close to $1,000,000."

While no figures are compiled locally on truck loadings, they have shot up tremendously in the past three months, with estimates ranging from 25 to 50 per cent.

One branch manager said that his company within the past 30 days has experienced a shortage of hauling equipment due to the rapid increase in business.

In general, however, haulers point out, the trucking industry finds business good throughout the year with the exception of January and February when bad roads slow down operations.

SALES DOUBLED

September New Car Business Twice That of Year Ago.

More than twice as many new cars were sold in Richland county last month as in September, 1938, figures compiled by Norman P. Henry, deputy clerk of courts in charge of motor registrations, reported today.

The report listed 86 new car sales and 18 truck sales for last month as compared with 40 new cars and 10 trucks in September last year.

The county's September sales, however, showed a marked decline from the preceding month when 127 new cars and 13 new trucks were delivered by dealers.

Sales to Oct 1 this year were nearly double those for the same period last year, with 1,539 new cars sold so far in 1939 and only 798 in the corresponding period of 1938.

U.S. PLAN CALLS FOR 'SELECTIVE SERVICE' DRAFT

War Would Leave Men With Jobs Vital to Economic Structure Intact.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Should the United States ever become involved in war and congress enact a draft law, no man whose job is vital to the economic structure would be dragged away from his machine or office.

Munitions are as important as men, food as important as fighting. That is the theory behind the proposed industrial mobilization system, into which army and navy officials have written a selective service plan.

"Complicated weapons and machines are used up rapidly in war," says the 1939 version of the mobilization plan. "Armies and navies must not only be well supplied initially but must be maintained adequately and continuously.

"In addition, throughout the duration of war, the nation must continue to provide all the material items which the health and well-being of its civilian population depend. War is no longer simply a battle between armed forces in the field."

So, the draft plan adds, "the procurement of men is to be accomplished with the minimum of disturbance to the economic and social structure of the nation."

In the first call for a draft, it is estimated, 11,000,000 men between the ages of 21 and 30 would be registered. They would be classified as:

1. Those immediately available for service.
2. Those whose service would be deferred because of the importance of their jobs.
3. Those whose service would be deferred because they had sole dependents.
4. Those whose service would be undesirable for obvious reasons, such as bad health.

Of the 11,000,000 registered, officials estimate, only 4,100,000 would be left in class 1. An undisclosed number would be in class 2, men with vital jobs.

While exceptions are to be made of such men, the draft plan contains a warning to any director of selective service:

"A hint of favoritism or special privilege in the system will destroy him and the public confidence in the fairness of selective service. There must be no 'politics' in the system."

Claims for deferment of service would have to be sworn to and supported by other affidavits. Ultimately a man's neighbors, those who know him best, would be the ones who decided his deferment by swearing to the nature of his job.

GIVEN ANSWER

Commission's Critics Told of Lack of Funds.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—State industrial commissioners countered criticism by the Citizens Tax League of Ohio today by declaring that they had attempted to set up a bookkeeping system as demanded by the league but lacked sufficient funds.

The league had reported to Gov. John W. Bricker that the commission had ignored recommendations made following numerous surveys it financed and lacked bookkeeping records "which were deemed indispensible even to the corner grocery store of the horse-and-buggy days."

A commission statement asserted that the present legislature struck out a $153,200 item in the commission budget for additions and betterments and also reduced the administration appropriation fund $181,000 below the actual expenditure for the past biennium.

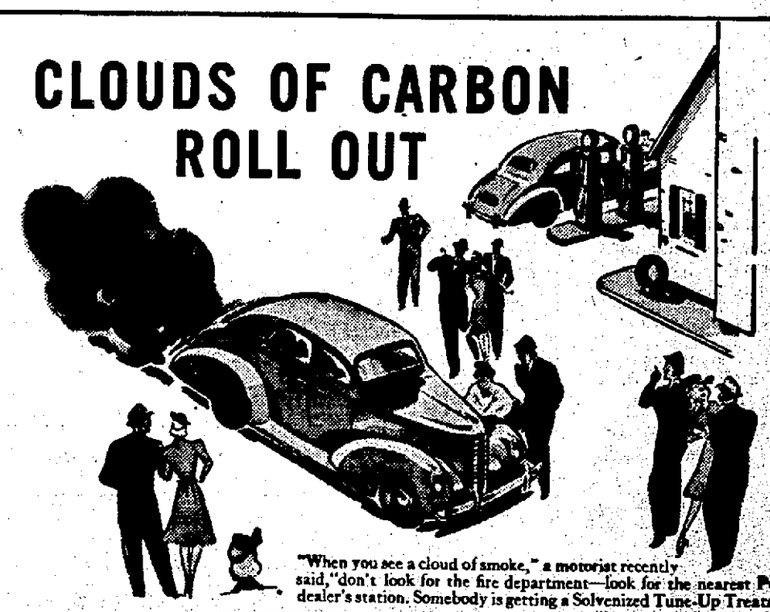
CLOUDS OF CARBON ROLL OUT



"When you see a cloud of smoke," a motorist recently said, "don't look for the fire department—look for the nearest Pure Oil dealer's station. Somebody is getting a Solvenized Tune-Up Treatment."

YOUR EYES WILL TELL YOU WHY PURE OIL'S NEW SOLVENIZED* TUNE-UP PLAN IS SUCH A HIT WITH MOTORISTS IN 25 STATES

WHAT A SATISFACTION it is to see excess carbon which has been choking your motor, coming out the exhaust.

Don't put off getting this Solvenized "Tune-Up" Treatment for your car. It is STEP No. 1 of the "TUNE-UP" PLAN.

It gets rid of that excess carbon which clogs performance, sets up knocks, wastes gas and oil. It costs $1.00—money back if not satisfied—you to be the sole judge. Takes only thirty minutes—the smartest dollar you ever spent, the best half-hour, too.

Then take STEP No. 2 of the "TUNE-UP" PLAN—start using Solvenized Pure-Pep Gasoline, a premium quality gasoline AT THE PRICE OF REGULAR. Gallon for gallon it is as good a gasoline as you can get for the money, plus the same exclusive solvent which tends to cleanse and lubricate the entire fuel system and keep excess carbon from piling up.

Try this 2-Step Tune-Up Plan. Start today.

Note: If your car is new and relatively carbon-free, we strongly recommend use of this Solvenized premium quality gasoline, even without the Treatment, because it fights carbon formation—helps keep performance "factory fresh." *Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

NOTRE DAME BOY GETS RESULTS

Dave Harris, Chicago, Ill.

Dave Harris, senior at Notre Dame University, often makes the round-trip from his home to South Bend (200 miles) on one full tank of gasoline.

He recently started using the Solvenized Tune-Up Plan. On the very first trip after the Treatment, the car was driven around South Bend for 20 miles before starting back to Chicago. Dave did not believe he had enough gasoline for the trip back but when he stopped for more, the tank still held over a gallon of gasoline! An increase in gasoline mileage of over 10%!

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Every girl likes a school story and two such books have been recently added to the Children's room collection. One is a sympathetic story of a Negro girl who moved from Minneapolis to South Carolina for her last year of high school. The other is about boarding school life in England.

"SHUTTERED WINDOWS" by Florence Means. Harriet Freeman had gone to a large high school in Minneapolis and had excelled in music and sports. After her parents died, however, she wished to look for her grandmother who lived in the south. She found her in one of the humble island cabins and decided to go to a girl school for Negroes there, so she could learn to help her own people.

"A WORLD WITHIN A SCHOOL" by Lucy Kinloch. Girls who are very busy at sports and studies in a boarding school are apt to find themselves in a separate world from everyone else. It was so with Nora O'Connor. The friendships, the excitement, and the joys of the school itself kept Nora very busy. Her admiration for one of the older girls in the school makes up much of the story.

CRIME TEARS ON + + + + +

By CAROLYN WELLS

(Copyright, 1939)

CHAPTER XXII

"Legally involved, at the moment, not at all. But at his death the Committee stood to receive a bequest from Mr. Harley Madison's estate."

"You have not, then, been informed that Mr. Madison died intestate?"

"No, nor do I believe that. He told me frankly about the different wills he made, one after the other, every one increasing the legacy to the village. Why, that was the idol of his life, this little village and the flourishing town he intended to make of it. He was really dotty on the subject."

"I know that, but it didn't prevent him from tearing and burning his only existing will, and he died before he could draw another."

"Can you give me more details?"

Stone complied, and soon Mr. Riley was in possession of the awful facts that would, it seemed to him, wipe out the Committee and deprive its members of certain emoluments which they had come to look upon as their own.

* * *

Riley's hard, blue eyes grew more and more troubled as Stone talked.

"I understand Madison was murdered," Riley said, after a pause.

"Yes, on the eve of a great happiness. He had just announced his engagement to Miss Verne, of motion picture fame."

"Yes, I know. Who killed him?"

"That's what I am trying to clear up. Could you suspect any one connected with the Village plans, who might feel in haste to get the big legacy?"

"Are you asking which members of the Committee hated him?"

"I hadn't intended to put it like that, but I will. Can you tell me?"

"Of course I can, but why should I?"

"In the interests of justice, and to keep yourself entirely clean of any suspicion of being an accessory."

Riley looked very thoughtfully. "If I tell you of his enemies, will you promise to keep my name out of it?"

"As far as I can."

"Well, it's common belief that Job Hendrick and Potter, the butcher, and Clarence Mason would willingly see Madison dead, for they've often said so, or as good as."

"I've met Potter and Hendricks, but Mason, who is he?"

"He's an oil baron. Or, that's what he likes to be called. He and Harley Madison never could see things alike. Whatever one thought the other made it his business to think differently. But, look here, Mr. Stone, how did anybody kill Harley Madison? I understand it was done in a room that nobody could get into."

"That's the mystery. It was done in a room nobody could get into. But I know how to get a door unlocked, that had been locked on the other side and the key left in."

"How?"

"Two ways. One is a small gadget called a oustiti, which is now made in so many clever designs, that nearly every door will fall open at its touch. The exception is one of these old, complicated back-number locks, such as Mr. Madison chose to have on the door of his bedroom. The peculiar formation of that lock and key will not respond to the use of the oustiti. And the old dodge of turning the key by use of strong pliers will not work, if the end of the key does not come through on the other side of the door, which in this case it doesn't. But I shall master it yet, of that I am sure."

"What do you call the thing? Wiss——what?"

"Oustiti, French, is the name of a small agile monkey. Sometimes it is called the wistit. The name was given to this small tool, because of its quick and clever manipulations of its task."

"You spoke of another way in."

The other way I mentioned is really a way out. You see the intruder at the Madison house had to get in and out both. A way out, leaving the door locked behind you, is to stick a pencil with a string tied to it, through the handle of the key, and as you go out, carry the string through the door with you. Once outside and the door latched, pull steadily on the string and the pencil will turn the key. Then pull the string through the door, and run away."

"Where's the pencil?"

"Oh, that stays inside on the floor. But it's such a little snubby old thing nobody notices it . . . The way crime tears on, the whole population must be taught how to meet it."

* * *

Fleming Stone had drifted into this conversation that he might study the man he was with. He came to the conclusion that Riley was not the murderer, but that he was a shrewd, wily lawyer, who was not over-scrupulous in his ways and means.

"I suppose," the detective said, "you were the lawyer for the corporation?"

"Would have been, if it had become a corporation, which was what we were planning. And I would have made a good thing of it. When it got fairly going, there would have been differences of opinion, and consequent libel suits and all that, and I would have been kept busy."

"Yes, you've lost a snug berth," Stone sympathized. "You're sure the rest of you won't go on?"

"How can we, without the Madison money? Do the other men know what you've told me?"

"Potter and Hendricks know it, and it will soon be public knowledge. Now, look here, Mr. Riley, somebody murdered Harley Madison. Could you suspect any one of the committee men, and if so, which one?"

"It might be said that loyalty to the others ought to seal my lips, and all that. But where is there any reason for my loyalty? What is there for me to be loyal to? The committee is not in any way a real organization, it was merely a preliminary meeting or two to get us started. We meant to organize at the next meeting and get incorporated and all that. I should have looked after all that business, and should have earned thereby, and justly, a tidy sum. I am real put out about it all, and whoever killed Madison did us all in."

"But himself, as well as the others. Remember, he did not know that Madison would die intestate. You seem fairly certain, that some member of your crowd did this thing, now, what do you —assume to be the motive?"

"Just this. It was rumored that Mr. Madison was in love with the actress who was visiting at his home. We began to see him taking unto himself a bride, who would, perhaps, turn his thoughts from his beloved village, and like as not, take him to New York to live. They might travel abroad and in their pleasure and new interests, he would forget all about the little village he loved so well, and we would see or hear of him no more."

"Did some one make a remark or drop a hint that if Madison died before his marriage, and also, before he had drawn a new will in his lady's favor, it would be a mighty good thing for the village committee men?"

"Well, I never heard it put into words, but there certainly were rumors and tales, which no doubt increased with every telling, all to the effect that the death of Harley Madison would be a blessing in disguise."

"I see. And now, Mr. Riley, what name was most prominent in these rumors and faint suggestions?"

"It cannot be denied that Potter and Hendricks were the most belligerent, but still waters run deep, and Clarence Mason, though he said little, was glowering with hate whenever Madison's name was mentioned."

"Private quarrels, I suppose?"

"Not so very private. It was all about the Town Hall. In a nutshell, the controversy between those two, was over the new Town Hall. Mason wanted it about the size of the coliseum, and decorated like a circus chariot. Madison was out for a large, dignified building, and they clashed. Mason called Madison a skinflint and a miser, and Madison, who never lost his temper, either ignored Mason, or held him up to ridicule. Mason is a sensitive cuss, but not garrulous. He said little, but he has looked like a revengeful fiend ever since. I'd believe it of him, if I heard he'd killed Madison, but how the devil he could manage it, I can't see."

"You'd suspect him before you would Hendricks, then?"

Before Hendricks? I don't know. Before Potter? No. Henry Potter is a bad man. Born bad. I don't say he murdered anybody, but if you're looking for a suspect among the members of the committee, you can't do better than to choose Henry Potter."

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Every girl likes a school story and two such books have been recently added to the Children's room collection. One is a sympathetic story of a Negro girl who moved from Minneapolis to South Carolina for her last year of high school. The other is about boarding school life in England.

"SHUTTERED WINDOWS" by Florence Means. Harriet Freeman had gone to a large high school in Minneapolis and had excelled in music and sports. After her parents died, however, she wished to look for her grandmother who lived in the south. She found her in one of the humble island cabins and decided to go to a girl school for Negroes there, so she could learn to help her own people.

"A WORLD WITHIN A SCHOOL" by Lucy Kinloch. Girls who are very busy at sports and studies in a boarding school are apt to find themselves in a separate world from everyone else. It was so with Nora O'Connor. The friendships, the excitement, and the joys of the school itself kept Nora very busy. Her admiration for one of the older girls in the school makes up much of the story.

CRIME TEARS ON + + + + +

By CAROLYN WELLS

(Copyright, 1939)

CHAPTER XXII

"Legally involved, at the moment, not at all. But at his death the Committee stood to receive a bequest from Mr. Harley Madison's estate."

"You have not, then, been informed that Mr. Madison died intestate?"

"No, nor do I believe that. He told me frankly about the different wills he made, one after the other, every one increasing the legacy to the village. Why, that was the idol of his life, this little village and the flourishing town he intended to make of it. He was really dotty on the subject."

"I know that, but it didn't prevent him from tearing and burning his only existing will, and he died before he could draw another."

"Can you give me more details?"

Stone complied, and soon Mr. Riley was in possession of the awful facts that would, it seemed to him, wipe out the Committee and deprive its members of certain emoluments which they had come to look upon as their own.

* * *

Riley's hard, blue eyes grew more and more troubled as Stone talked.

"I understand Madison was murdered," Riley said, after a pause.

"Yes, on the eve of a great happiness. He had just announced his engagement to Miss Verne, of motion picture fame."

"Yes, I know. Who killed him?"

"That's what I am trying to clear up. Could you suspect any one connected with the Village plans, who might feel in haste to get the big legacy?"

"Are you asking which members of the Committee hated him?"

"I hadn't intended to put it like that, but I will. Can you tell me?"

"Of course I can, but why should I?"

"In the interests of justice, and to keep yourself entirely clean of any suspicion of being an accessory."

Riley looked very thoughtfully. "If I tell you of his enemies, will you promise to keep my name out of it?"

"As far as I can."

"Well, it's common belief that Job Hendrick and Potter, the butcher, and Clarence Mason would willingly see Madison dead, for they've often said so, or as good as."

"I've met Potter and Hendricks, but Mason, who is he?"

"He's an oil baron. Or, that's what he likes to be called. He and Harley Madison never could see things alike. Whatever one thought the other made it his business to think differently. But, look here, Mr. Stone, how did anybody kill Harley Madison? I understand it was done in a room that nobody could get into."

"That's the mystery. It was done in a room nobody could get into. But I know how to get a door unlocked, that had been locked on the other side and the key left in."

"How?"

"Two ways. One is a small gadget called a oustiti, which is now made in so many clever designs, that nearly every door will fall open at its touch. The exception is one of these old, complicated back-number locks, such as Mr. Madison chose to have on the door of his bedroom. The peculiar formation of that lock and key will not respond to the use of the oustiti. And the old dodge of turning the key by use of strong pliers will not work, if the end of the key does not come through on the other side of the door, which in this case it doesn't. But I shall master it yet, of that I am sure."

"What do you call the thing? Wiss——what?"

"Oustiti, French, is the name of a small agile monkey. Sometimes it is called the wistit. The name was given to this small tool, because of its quick and clever manipulations of its task."

"You spoke of another way in."

The other way I mentioned is really a way out. You see the intruder at the Madison house had to get in and out both. A way out, leaving the door locked behind you, is to stick a pencil with a string tied to it, through the handle of the key, and as you go out, carry the string through the door with you. Once outside and the door latched, pull steadily on the string and the pencil will turn the key. Then pull the string through the door, and run away."

"Where's the pencil?"

"Oh, that stays inside on the floor. But it's such a little snubby old thing nobody notices it . . . The way crime tears on, the whole population must be taught how to meet it."

* * *

Fleming Stone had drifted into this conversation that he might study the man he was with. He came to the conclusion that Riley was not the murderer, but that he was a shrewd, wily lawyer, who was not over-scrupulous in his ways and means.

"I suppose," the detective said, "you were the lawyer for the corporation?"

"Would have been, if it had become a corporation, which was what we were planning. And I would have made a good thing of it. When it got fairly going, there would have been differences of opinion, and consequent libel suits and all that, and I would have been kept busy."

"Yes, you've lost a snug berth," Stone sympathized. "You're sure the rest of you won't go on?"

"How can we, without the Madison money? Do the other men know what you've told me?"

"Potter and Hendricks know it, and it will soon be public knowledge. Now, look here, Mr. Riley, somebody murdered Harley Madison. Could you suspect any one of the committee men, and if so, which one?"

"It might be said that loyalty to the others ought to seal my lips, and all that. But where is there any reason for my loyalty? What is there for me to be loyal to? The committee is not in any way a real organization, it was merely a preliminary meeting or two to get us started. We meant to organize at the next meeting and get incorporated and all that. I should have looked after all that business, and should have earned thereby, and justly, a tidy sum. I am real put out about it all, and whoever killed Madison did us all in."

"But himself, as well as the others. Remember, he did not know that Madison would die intestate. You seem fairly certain, that some member of your crowd did this thing, now, what do you—assume to be the motive?"

"Just this. It was rumored that Mr. Madison was in love with the actress who was visiting at his home. We began to see him taking unto himself a bride, who would, perhaps, turn his thoughts from his beloved village, and like as not, take him to New York to live. They might travel abroad and in their pleasure and new interests, he would forget all about the little village he loved so well, and we would see or hear of him no more."

"Did some one make a remark or drop a hint that if Madison died before his marriage, and also, before he had drawn a new will in his lady's favor, it would be a mighty good thing for the village committee men?"

"Well, I never heard it put into words, but there certainly were rumors and tales, which no doubt increased with every telling, all to the effect that the death of Harley Madison would be a blessing in disguise."

"I see. And now, Mr. Riley, what name was most prominent in these rumors and faint suggestions?"

"It cannot be denied that Potter and Hendricks were the most belligerent, but still waters run deep, and Clarence Mason, though he said little, was glowering with hate whenever Madison's name was mentioned."

"Private quarrels, I suppose?"

"Not so very private. It was all about the Town Hall. In a nutshell, the controversy between those two, was over the new Town Hall. Mason wanted it about the size of the coliseum, and decorated like a circus chariot. Madison was out for a large, dignified building, and they clashed. Mason called Madison a skinflint and a miser, and Madison, who never lost his temper, either ignored Mason, or held him up to ridicule. Mason is a sensitive cuss, but not garrulous. He said little, but he has looked like a revengeful fiend ever since. I'd believe it of him, if I heard he'd killed Madison, but how the devil he could manage it, I can't see."

"You'd suspect him before you would Hendricks, then?"

Before Hendricks? I don't know. Before Potter? No. Henry Potter is a bad man. Born bad. I don't say he murdered anybody, but if you're looking for a suspect among the members of the committee, you can't do better than to choose Henry Potter."

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1939.

Benito lately seems too good to be true. What's he cooking up? (Now don't say Adolf's goose.)

When war comes now, people burrow underground. The next stage may be a mole civilization.

According to a biologist, "it took Nature six million years to make the man of today"—giving an idea of how little could be expected of even a third term.

An Adequate Defense

THE TERM "adequate national defense" has been one that meant something rather vague to the average American citizen until recently; until, let us say, the totalitarian states of Europe loomed up as a real menace to world peace. It was a term that was used in speeches by congressmen and American Legion convention speakers.

But suddenly, in late August, when Germany invaded Poland and the Allies declared war, we became acutely "defense conscious." We began to ask ourselves: "How many airplanes do we have and how many trained pilots? How does our navy compare with our need to defend two long coast lines? Do we have an army sufficient to look after our southern boundaries in case an enemy from across the water decided to set up military bases below the border? What do we have in the way of equipment for a war of defense?"

The answer to the last two questions could be glimpsed yesterday in the mechanized army unit that stopped in Mansfield on its Ohio tour. It was only an infinite part of our national defense, but it gave one a comforting assurance to know that those sturdy little tanks and armored combat cars were only a very small portion of a formidable land armada.

And those soldiers who wore their helmets at a Yankee-Doodle angle over one eye, are an important part of national defense. They don't want war and they don't want to fight any more than anyone else—but if war comes to America, they will be trained and ready.

Adequate national defense may have been a debatable and a relative term a few years ago. Today it has a definite meaning.

Gardening Goes on

WE BORROW this passage from a current gardening page, in the belief that many readers who have had their minds on more tragic things lately will appreciate it.

"October is the best time for fall sowing. There will be a fine lot of very early flowers, and these first plants can be pulled up after they have bloomed, to make way for spring planting. Poppies, Baby's Breath, Larkspur, Cornflower, Phlox, Sweet Alyssum, Sweet Peas, Pansies, Cosmos and many others may be sown.

"October is the best time, also, to put things in order. All the stalks should be pulled up and thrown on the compost heap. The ground should then be spaded and plenty of plant food dug into the soil. The garden passes the winter in either of two ways. The easier plan is to leave the surface rough, so frost, wind and sun will break up the clods and sweeten the soil. The second plan is even better. It is to plant a 'cover crop' of rye, winter wheat or Sudan grass immediately. This green cover will be ready to spade under in the spring and is a wonderful help in making the garden fertile next summer."

There will be another spring and summer, never fear, in spite of wars and rumors of wars. Life goes on. "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night, shall not cease."

Going to Sleep

IN THIS mixed-up world, many people can't keep awake and many others can't go to sleep. The latter are probably increasing, and there are increasing efforts to do something about it.

A writer in the Journal of the American Medical association throws overboard a lot of sacred ideas on that subject. He thinks counting imaginary sheep as they go over an imaginary fence is foolishness. He wouldn't read in bed, either, or tie the conscious mind to any kind of concentrated effort. He would train his mind, as it were, to let his mind alone, and his system would be simply to have no system. The mind should roam wherever it wants to, and if there is no interference the end will be sleep.

It sounds reasonable. That is probably the way most people go to sleep.

There is another way, the opposite of this, which is said to work wonderfully when you once get used to it. You simply stop thinking, making the mind a blank, and then you just naturally go to sleep without knowing it. When not thinking, there is nothing for the mind to do but sleep.

That is probably the way the animals do. But it takes quite an effort for most people to learn the trick.

A Salute To Fall—Pancakes

FALL, acclaimed by some as the finest season of the year, brings many things to a summer-weary populace. There is for instance the harvest moon, for those who like moons. The naturalist admires the vari-colored leaves as the trees shed their summer dress. Then there is the crisp autumn air that seems to give you a new outlook on life.

You could go on and on, enumerating such things, but there is something of vastly more importance that fall brings to the gourmand—pancakes. Of course there are some unorthodox eaters who feast on these golden brown delicacies even in 90-degree heat, but not so with the man of more refined eating habits.

He waits for fall before he digs into his stack of cakes, partially submerged with maple syrup and generously covered with butter. He goes for this dish with all the enthusiasm of one greeting a long lost friend.

So it is happy days again for the pancake eater. A salute to fall—and to pancakes.

A president never likes to "have congress on his hands" and congress likes to keep an eye on the president, and the people like to keep an eye on both, and maybe all of 'em are right.

An Edinburgh professor confidently affirms, "Man is not at his best yet"—which seems to encourage another thousand years of effort.

Adolf lately was hollering "Let's go!" And now he's wishing somebody would help him let go.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—As the United States Coast Guard comes under the president's reorganization plan, it might prove worthwhile to consider this little known branch of the service. I have always thought of it as one of the most adventurous and romantic branches of our armed service.

Right now it has a number of armed cutters patrolling the North Atlantic shipping lanes, searching for icebergs. Ever since the Titantic disaster the Coast Guard has been guarding shipping against the hidden menaces of the Atlantic.

These big icebergs are seven-eighths under water. Dynamite has no more effect on them than firecrackers. The Coast Guard, when it discovers one, simply follows it, radioing its position to all ships in the vicinity. How effective this watch has proved is demonstrated by the fact that not a ship has been sunk and not a life lost since the Coast Guard organized the ice patrol.

As for the big Coast Guard cutters, they are as large as our naval destroyers, and almost as formidable. They are equipped with anti-aircraft. They pack big guns. They are over three hundred feet long and can operate in the polar regions or the tropics.

* * *

BUT ships aren't the only means of operation. They have huge flying boats. Sometimes they take off in the dead of night in answer to calls of distress from the sea.

Only a few weeks ago the captain of a fishing schooner was critically injured in an accident. The ship was off the Virginia capes. The Coast Guard's flying ship V-170 made a dramatic flight through mist and fog, lighted on the water near the ship, took the captain aboard, and raced back with him to a hospital at Cape May, New Jersey—in time.

All along the Atlantic coast, all along the Pacific coast, in Hawaii and in the Great Lakes and the gulf the Coast Guard protects American lives and property.

Its headquarters in New York are in the Custom House and its chief of staff is Commander J. S. Baylis, a man who has grown up with the service. He has served with the ice patrol off the Grand Banks. He was with the first ship to reach the Island of Kodiak, that northland home of the black bears, when a volcano erupted and destroyed a village of trappers and fishermen.

He brought Vilhjalmur Stefansson back from Alaska after the explorer had mushed a thousand miles overland from Point Barrow. This was the time Stefansson discovered the blond Eskimos.

* * *

THE U. S. Coast Guard has been called a salt water police force and a sea-going fire department. Its motto is "Semper Paratus—Always ready." It has planes patrolling the Mexican border, searching for smugglers. In time of war it automatically becomes a part of the U. S. Navy, but in times of peace it operates independently from the army and navy.

And now the Coast Guard is to take over the Lighthouse service. It has grown from ten unwieldy, small craft to an independent navy.

It all began nearly 160 years ago when Alexander Hamilton, then secretary of the treasury, asked congress for some ships to protect American lives and property along the coast.

As for Commander Baylis, of the New York division, some day I hope to write a story that will do justice to his many adventures and his influence on the service.

OUT ON TWO LIMBS

'Ham-and-Eggers' After Johnson

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — California "Ham - and - Eggers" have set out to make this the last fight over foreign policy in which Senator Hiram Johnson will participate. They are out to beat him.

"Ham-and-Eggers" are not concerned, of course, with the current battle over the Neutrality act. Foreign affairs have nothing to do with their campaign. They have a plan to put jack in the jeans of every man and women over 50. The idea has caught on so widely that within the past year they have elected a governor, a United States senator, and now hope to fasten their scheme solidly on California at a November election.

It might be added at this point that the proposed defeat of Senator Johnson is largely a by-product of the major enterprise. He is against "Ham-and-Eggs" so they are against him—or at least the leaders indicate they are. When he comes up for re-election next fall they will have a candidate against him if they can—and shake him loose from the position he has held since 1916.

"Ham-and-Eggs" is, of course, simply the popular title for the scheme under which a flood of money would be distributed in California by pouring it first into the hands of people over 50 years of age.

* * *

How It Works.

THE idea is this:

Every Thursday all the "senior citizens" of California will be given paper slips of a face total of $30—not cash, but a circulating medium good only in California. The persons who get it will spend it. On one day each week the holder of the slip must buy a stamp (using real money) and stick it on the back of the money, two cents for each $1 of face amount.

The stamps will be issued by the state of California and the real money paid for the stamps will go to the treasury. At the end of a year each dollar of scrip supposedly will bear on its back $1.04 in stamps. The idea lost out last year by a margin so narrow it gave many solid citizens the shivers. At the same time, supporters of the idea were encouraged.

* * *

Control Democrats.

HOW does Senator Johnson come into it? That is not hard to explain. "Ham-and-Eggs" is a California political organization. It appeals to the same voters who in 1934 almost installed Upton Sinclair and EPIC as part of the life in Cailfornia. It appeals to the voters who follow Doctor Townsend.

Last year they took over control of the Democratic party, defeated Senator McAdoo in the primaries and swept on to victory in November. Republicans and old-line Democrats could not put up anything half so tempting.

Now Ellis Patterson, lieutenant governor, and one of the kingpins of the movement, has said he will seek the Democratic nomination for United States senator to oppose Johnson in 1940. If "Ham-and-Eggs" sticks to him in the primaries he undoubtedly will get the nomination.

* * *

'Johnson Myth'.

BEATING Johnson the following November is another matter. Johnson has become a tradition. In 1934 he was the candidate of every party. When he first ran in 1916, after a session as governor, Charles Evans Hughes, Republican presidential candidate, slighted him. Patriotic Californians turned on Hughes and it cost him the state and the presidency. Johnson was elected.

Johnson supporters already have accepted the prospect that he will not be the Democratic nominee in 1940. He will run only as a Republican. He once supported President Roosevelt and Roosevelt supported him. Now some Rooseveltians are against him and will help "Ham-and-Eggs" try to break what they call the "myth of Hiram Johnson." It won't be easy.

Listen, World!

It's Just a Dog Fight.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

The devlish part about this Neutrality argument is that it has most of us common folk completely hexed. The more we read, the more complicated it becomes. . .the more we listen, the less we know.

That wouldn't have mattered greatly once, when common folk had little voice in the affairs of state. But things are different now. We Americans have learned a much needed lesson. We let ourselves be bullyragged by the Big Boys into that 1917 horror. We let them work their racket at Versailles, while we took the rap. But we don't intend to let it happen again. We know, now, exactly where we stand.

We know that it's up to us—the plain people of America—to keep America out of war, or shove her in. We know that America's life—or death—is in our hands.

That's jake by us. We've packed some pretty heavy burdens in those hands—toted plenty of grief—yet managed to come on right side up. Just give us the hang of a thing and you can generally bet on good old American sense and spunk to turn the trick. But here's what gets us down in this particular case—

What is "the hang of" this neutrality crisis? And how can we know what action is right or wrong for these United States.

Any kid understood Neutrality once. All you had to do was sit tight on the safest fence. Now, beside sitting, you've got to do a Jack-knife Dive, with a coupla somersaults and an old-fashioned "belly-buster," ending up (maybe!) with an Australian crawl executed with a back-hand stroke, under water. Doesn't make sense? Of course it doesn't. Neither do the current conceptions of Neutrality. Which is why most of us are going round in dizzy circles. So what?

Well, I'm no military expert or legal analyst. But it seems plain to me that what we Americans need first and most is to realize that all this high-falutin' hocus-pocus is the BUNK.

There is no deep, dark mystery about neutrality. It means just what it has always meant. . . . Keeping your nose out of the other fellows' business completely and permanently.

I do not know International Law—but I do know human nature. And I learned, at least 50 years ago, that if there's a dog fight you'd better not try to peddle any soup bones, or you'll get your shin nicked—plenty. Will the dogs stop to determine who's to blame, or consult treaties or contracts? Not they! A dog's a dog—and a bone's a bone—and the fellow who gets in between them is just OUT-OF-LUCK!

There's nothing complicated about that fact . . . nothing that requires congressional argument or senatorial action. It's a plain matter of pups, people—and common sense.

The "laws of civilized warfare?" There's no such thing as civilized warfare. All wars are stupid and selfish . . . all men, when they start fighting, are savages and liars. In short, this European frame is just another dog-fight, and there's only one course for us Americans to pursue—

KEEP OUT OF IT!

Don't let them fool you with a lot of pretty palavar about "gentlemen's agreement" and "national honor." There aren't any gentlemen in a world war and there isn't any honor. And don't try to rationalize your own greediness by saying we "need to hang on to our foreign trade and friendly relationships."

Our foreign trade, at its best, represents only about 7 per cent of our income. As for "friendly relationships" . . . that's eyewash! How did they prove their affection after the last war? The whole bunch of them — including France and England—will like us as long as we've got what they want—and give us the bum's rush when we haven't.

Above all, don't fool yourself that our merchandise or our boys are needed to Save Democracy. There's just one hunk of Democracy that requires our attention and that is AMERICA. And for the last ten years we've had the heckuva time hanging on to that. If we've got to peddle soup-bones, and risk shin-bones, there's a lean old gent, named Uncle Sam, who can use all we have.

Get out of that dog-fight and up on that fence — and stay there!

Ohio Anecdotes

Historic Portage.

The oldest preserved account of Interior Ohio history was written by a French officer in 1718, in which he described the four-mile Portage between the Sandusky and Scioto rivers.

The story surrounding the Portage is both interesting and tragic: Historically interesting because it was at the Portage French officers met with war parties of several Indian tribes and encouraged them in their excursions against southern tribes, tragic because had the Mingoes, Twigtwees, Wyandots, Shawnees and Senecas heeded the wise counsel of their sachems against treaties, these Ohio country tribes possibly would have remained claimants to the best hunting grounds in the country.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Officials don't want anything said about it, but the British black list is casting an ominous shadow over American shipping. One American shipping firm even went to the extent of at first refusing a shipment for a Brazilian company because the goods were on the British black list and therefore dangerous.

It will be recalled that it was the British black list which caused so many complications with the United States during the last war. Companies suspected of trading with the enemy were listed by the British, and any goods consigned to them were promptly seized on the high seas or anywhere else that the British navy could lay hands on them.

The new British black list was published last week. Shortly thereafter, Moore and McCormack, chief steamship operators between the United States and the east coast of Latin America, refused to accept a shipment from the Brazilian firm of Wille and company because it was on the British black list. The latter company is run by a Brazilian of German origin, but the goods were consigned to New York, not to Germany.

U. S. commerce department officials were outraged that an American steamship company should bar a Brazilian shipment merely because of British frowns. State department reports indicated that Moore and McCormick had reversed their position regarding Wille and Co., but commerce department experts, more alert regarding U. S. trade interests, reported that the shipping firm also had rejected a cargo from Stout and Company of Buenos Aires.

The reports were that cargoes between North and South America from all blacklisted firms were being refused. This policy was being adopted despite the declaration at the Panama conference barring belligerent interference with neutral shipping in Pan-American waters.

Gen. Johnson's Relative.

When John Carmody was appointed boss of the new Public Works set-up (now including Public Roads, U. S. Housing, etc., as well as the old PWA), one of his first journalistic pannings came from General Hugh Johnson. As usual, the general was violent and aciduous.

A month or so later, after Carmody took the oath of office, the brother-in-law of General Johnson, Major Covington G. Kilbourne, was eased out of his job. He was given an indefinite furlough despite the pleas of Secretary Ickes' friends that Kilbourne was an efficient engineer and that there was absolutely no politics mixed up in his appointment.

Note—Ickes, who appointed Kilbourne under the old PWA, has been called "Howling Harold" by General Johnson, plus various other choice epithets, but never dropped Johnson's brother-in-law.

Capital Chaff.

Senator Nye is talking about a three billion dollar public works appropriation to replace war business this country would lose by barring all shipments, munitions and otherwise, to the belligerents. . . . Keep an eye on Frank Murphy if and when Justice Butler steps down from the supreme court. Both are Catholics and both come from the same section of the country, Butler from Minnesota and Murphy from Michigan. Only difficulty is that Murphy is so engrossed with his justice department job that he might not take a court appointment. . . . Congressman Tom Hemmings of Missouri came back from a trip to the west coast recently reporting sentiment increasingly strong for a third term. Young William Jennings Bryan told Hemmings in California that the state was 3 to 2 for Roosevelt. . . . High officials will tell you privately that the British Empire is on the toughest spot in its long and sometimes precarious history.

No Propagandist.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was extremely indignant when he learned that isolationist elements were using his neutrality broadcast to put pressure on congress against repeal of the arms embargo.

"I don't want to get mixed up in any political controversy," the flyer protested to intimates. "I didn't take any stand on the embargo in my speech. Why are these people trying to use me for their own ends? I am interested only in keeping our country out of war. It is extremely unfortunate that my remarks are being interpreted otherwise."

Political Dollars.

Remarked Warren Pierson, explaining his $13,000,000 Export-Import bank credit to Fascist Spain which has been severely criticized as an aid to Franco: "We can't be political in making these loans."

Next day, state department officials attending the Pan-American conference in Panama let it be known that two Export-Import bank loans would be given to Bolivia and Colombia purely for political reasons.

Note—American business men who study European credit say the U. S. cotton credit to Spain has a 25 per cent chance of being collected. The state department now wants congress to give it more power for foreign credits.

Fascists In Capitol.

Congressmen are supposed to stick together. Traditionally the houses of congress are two big gentlemen's clubs. But today if you happen into the office of Representative Jacob Thorkelson of Butte, Mont., you may find him engrossed with an attorney for William D. Pelley of the Silver Shirts, who is suing Thorkelson's colleagues on the Dies committee.

The attorney is Franklin Anderson, retained by Pelley in a libel suit which the Silver Shirt chief has brought against all of the Dies committee for statements made about him. Anderson is in and out of Thorkelson's office almost every day.

Thorkelson is famous in congress for his pro-Nazi-Fascist speeches. He is one of the most garrulous speakers in the house and a thorn in the side of his Republican colleagues, who don't know how to keep him quiet.

Born in Norway, Thorkelson lists himself as a surgeon, also engaged in the advertising business and has been a ship's master. He came to congress last year after Senator Wheeler helped put him up for the purpose of defeating his liberal critic, Jerry O'Connell.

Note—Pelley has been subpoenaed by the Dies committee but the committee so far has not been able to locate him.

Corn Harvest

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

LAST week all about the countryside, my neighbors were cutting corn. The dry weather had made the stalks mature much earlier than usual and for weeks the long well-wrapped ears hung downward, ready for the harvest.

Often I have gone beside a standing field as the early dew accumulated upon the blades and been delighted with that pleasant sweetish odor that so pleasantly permeates the nearby neighborhood. In this impelling fragrance is the essence of autumn, sumptuous stores of food, the sunshine of summer days.

Times have changed. One man can do now what several have done before. The corn binder is the burden bearer of the modern ripened fields. I saw my nearest neighbor mount upon the springy seat and start his willing team down along a single row. The narrow, low set knives cut the stubble six to ten inches high, moving along continuously. The tall, heavy fodder, when severed, was pulled upright along between two close-moving, elevated chains until some 20 pounds were gathered, when by the movement of a wheel and steel arms, a well bound sheaf was dropped behind.

And this is why the present day hybrid corn is prized so highly. The plant is deeply rooted and will not lodge like that of the open pollinated strains. Even after the leaves have dried the heavy framework stands upright. Add to this a yield of six to ten bushels per acre more, and the average farmer will plant no other seed.

Late that evening I saw the field completely done, and acres of heavy bundles lying in the same position among the moist and bleeding stubbles. Early next morning the farmer and his son stood up long rows of heavy shocks and bound the tops with strands of twine. When evening came, the heavy task was done and the tall ranks of shocks stood like hooded soldiers guarding a treasure for the night.

In this same field, untouched by frost, are humerous large-leafed vines and dotted over the dark brown surface of the soil, laid bare to the autumn sun, the pumpkins spheres of gold. I have looked eastward along the fertile field, and seen the morning sun glisten on these scattered treasures, and for that moment I was a part of what I looked upon and wished for nothing more.

3. Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) proposed two major amendments. One would eliminate permission for the president to grant 90-day credits to belligerents; the other would give congress power to establish a war zone around all of Europe through which American vessels could not travel. Immediate objection was voiced by senate foreign relations committee Chairman Key Pittman (D., Nev.), who said that there were "safe spots" in Europe and that to deny passage to our ships would inflict too great hardship on shipping companies.

4. Coolness developed toward a resolution by Sen. Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) requesting the president to join with other neutral nations in urging European belligerents to reach "an immediate armistice." Taft said that "sometimes a request for peace is an unneutral act." that the question was "up to the president." Pittman and Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) also indicated opposition.

5. The administration claimed to have won a "doubtful" vote as the result of Connally's speech. It was understood that this vote belonged to Sen. W. Warren Barbour, (R., N.J.)

6. Sen. Bennett C. Clark, (D., Mo.) said he intended to "raise hell" the next time the foreign relations committee mets, in order to expedite action on his resolution calling for appointment of a special committee to investigate foreign propaganda.

Before leaving last night to attend the funeral of Sen. M. M. Logan, (D., KY.) Barkley said he was convinced that debate thus far "has been going our way," and that the administration "may have picked up one or two votes." He expected that major speeches on both sides would be disposed of early next week, but said there was no chance of a final vote next week.

Today's debate may strike a snag as a result of Tobey's efforts. He succeeded in holding the floor after introducing his motion late yesterday and when the senate convenes he must be recognized before the scheduled speakers.

He told the senate that he wanted to read excerpts from editorials of the New York Times of 1917 and 1918, and that it would take him "from 30 minutes to four hours, depending on how I feel." Leaders on both sides believed they could persuade him to place his exerpts in the congressional Record.

FINE PAID UP, HE LEAVES JAIL

Painesville Man Freed As Relatives Come to Rescue.

Philo R. Pease, 25, of Painesville, who has been in the county jail since July 27 serving out a six-months sentence and a $200 fine for assault and battery, was released today. Relatives paid his fine and the rest of his sentence was suspended by Mayor D. B. Young of Shelby.

Pease was convicted after he threatened Mrs. Frank Long, wife of a Shelby attorney, with a gun and tried to force her from her husband's car in Shelby last July. Atty. Long shoved Pease off the running board and sped away.

Pease was arrested in Mansfield after Shelby police trailed him to the edge of the city. Pease had served slightly more than two months of his six-months sentence.

said the description of the car has been identical in each case.

While school authorities warned children about entering the cars of strangers, police patrolled the vicinity of 10 city grade schools today.

Juvenile authorities and 120 schoolboy patrolmen also were given descriptions of the man and car.

Detectives and Sheriff Long who have been working on the case since last June said they believe the man to be "harmless" and that he was driving here from a nearby city.

They reported that they have been unable to get an accurate description of his car or the license number because of the ages of the children who have been unable to remember many details.

Detective Lee J. Remy said the man was first reported early in June when at least three small girls were picked up at North Lake park.

A short time later he appeared at a carnival at the Fairground and later at a carnival on East Fourth street, meanwhile visiting Crestline on two occasions.

DR. JACOB H. CULLER, PROMINENT FORMER LUCAS PASTOR, 93 TODAY

LUCAS — Stepping along sprightly in spite of the 66 years he has spent in the ministry of his church, Dr. Jacob Henry Culler, of Springfield, one of the most widely known Lutheran clergymen in the middle west, today celebrated his ninety-third birthday anniversary.

As he has done for many years, Dr. Culler celebrated the event at the country home of his nephew, David R. Culler, east of Lucas, present owner of the farm where the veteran minister was born, and where he spent his early boyhood.

There during the day he received numerous callers, greetings and gifts commemorating the anniversary occasion.

Part of the day Dr. Culler spent assisting his grand-nephews in husking a crop of hybrid corn on the Culler farm.

Often referred to as the "Grand Old Man" of the Lutheran Synod of Ohio, Dr. Culler is also the oldest living graduate of Wittenberg college at Springfield.

The oldest son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Zody) Culler, natives of Maryland and pioneer settlers in eastern Richland county, Dr. Culler was born on Oct. 5, 1846.

When only a few weeks old he was baptised in historic Mt. Zion church, near Lucas, now one of the oldest Lutheran congregations in Ohio.

After attending the country school near his home he enrolled as a student in Wittenberg college in the fall of 1867, graduating in 1871. He later completed the theological training offered by the college and was ordained into the Lutheran ministry in 1873.

He began his ministerial career in a country parish near Bryan, where he rode horseback through the woods to call on his parishioners and to reach his preaching points. Later he served congregations in Illinois, Iowa and elsewhere in Ohio.

For a number of years Dr. Culler served as pastor of St. Paul's

Several years ago he served as supply pastor of First Lutheran church, Mansfield, for a period of months.

For a number of years he has lived in retirement with his daughter, Miss Violet Culler, in the family home in Springfield.

CONSERVATION LEAGUE OPENS GALION PARLEY

State Organization to Hold Banquet Tonight as Climax to 2-Day Convention.

GALION — Reservations have been received for 232 delegates and Galion members of Child Conservation leagues for the banquet which will climax the 20th annual state convention at Peace Lutheran parish house here tonight.

Tonight's banquet speaker will be Walter Leckrone, Cleveland Press columnist, whose subject is "You Can't Believe All You Hear."

For weeks Galion's three circles which are affiliated with the state Child Conservation League, have been working on the convention program. Mrs. Albert Ritzhaupt was general chairman in charge of arrangements. Two officers of the state organization are Galion women. Mrs. W. R. Eckstein who is state president, and Mrs. Roger Gedfrey, who is state corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Eckstein will preside for the banquet tonight, and the guest of honor will be Mrs. Addison Bain of Marion, first state president.

The three Galion groups that are members of the league are Senior circle of the Child Conservation League, Junior Circle, and the Mothers' Study club.

At 10:30 this morning, registration started at the Peace Lutheran parish house, and at 11 a. m., an executive board meeting was held.

State officers and Galion chairmen who had charge of convention plans were entertained with a luncheon this noon at the home of Mrs. Fred Essex.

At 2 o'clock the convention was called to order by Mrs. Eckstein. The convention theme is "Our Community Responsibility Towards Successful Living."

On the program this afternoon was a panel discussion of "Youth and the Community." Speakers for the afternoon included Supt. O. E. Hill, Rev. P. E. Auer, and State Representative Kenneth Petri.

Invocation was given by Mrs. Ross W. Todd of Marion, tentral-southwest district president, and a welcome was extended by Mrs. James Leonard, president of the Galion Mothers' Study club. The musical features were a piano number by Theodore Rehl, and songs by Dale Bonsteel.

Highlights of the banquet program tonight besides the speaker, will include "Stepping Stones" by past state presidents; music by a vocal trio of the Senior circle of Galion, composed of Mrs. O. E. Hill, Mrs. R. A. Godfrey and Mrs. L. E. Place; violin numbers by Gale Shriner; and a play presented by Mary Alice Burden, Helen Britton, Joannah Postance and Mrs. Robert Phipps.

The two-day convention will close Friday afternoon. In the morning there will be a business session at 9 a. m. and invocation by the state vice president, Mrs. Walter Reynders of Toledo; election of officers; report of district presidents; report of circles and other outstanding business.

For the luncheon Friday noon there are already 216 reservations. This will be followed in the afternoon with final reports, installation of officers and other business.

The Friday afternoon speaker will be Mrs. Harold Edward Andrews of the faculty of Ashland college.

'CREDIT UTOPIA' URGED TO CURE ECONOMIC ILLS

Utah Sponsor of Program Which Would Abandon Use of Currency.

SALT LAKE CITY—Julian M. Cummings of Salt Lake City believes the United States can be turned into "Practical Utopia" and is setting out in an attempt to prove it to the country.

He has sent letters to all 48 governors and all members of congress urging them to support the plan—and contribute to the "Practical Utopia" organization he has established here.

Cummings' plan, in a nutshell, calls for abandonment of money in place of general credit and government operation of all business. But he insists his plan is not Socialism Instead he calls it a form of "government ownership, different than those advocated before, a new kind that will keep pace with aviation, radio and television."

"During the past few years, the New Deal has been a temporary salvation to our country and may continue to be for another year or two," Cummings said in explaining his plan, "but its very nature prohibits it from continuing indefinitely.

Based Upon Credit.

"An entirely new system must be inaugurated that is founded upon correct principles so it may endure as long as the earth stands It must be vitally different from everything we have ever had if it is to survive all possible conditions. 'Practical Utopia' is such a plan."

Cummings hopes to make "Practical Utopia" a "real issue in the next presidential election." He promises that adoption of the plan would "positively guarantee to every living soul a life-long steady job with adequate compensation, a beautiful home, free insurance of all kinds, free medical care, free education and free amusements'

Through a constitutional amendment, Cummings and his "Practical Utopia" would give the government the right to supersede money with credit because "money in any form has a limit, but credit knows no bounds."

Limitless Jobs Seen.

With the credit granted, 'the government could then offer credit in exchange for anything. Those who needed a job could get it from the government and receive his pay in credit Jobs would be limitless because of the vast supply of credit

Cummings admitted no private store would take credit it exchange for food or clothing but his answer to this is to establish government stores This he said, would be done by the government offering to purchase stores, factories, businesses, surplus property, supplies, farms, hotels "and in fact everything that has value or that is subject to private exchange."

For private owners who are reticent about selling to the government, "Practical Utopia" has the answer·

"The government would be compelled to enter into competition with them It will automatically have more than two-thirds of the nation as its customers since they will be using credit instead of money. The consumers therefore could not buy from private interests and they would be compelled to sell out.'

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there's something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills

WPA Digs Bones Of Pioneers, Gets Strong Protests

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Early Settlers association of the Western Reserve acted today to save bones of members' fore-fathers from WPA shovels as the Erie street cemetery in downtown Cleveland.

Thomas A. Knight, one of a three-man committee, said three century-old skulls and other bones had been scattered irreverently by WPA shovelers. He said perhaps as many as 150 Cleveland pioneers were buried in that strip, where a city-WPA street widening project is under way.

"This desecration must stop" Knight declared. The workers then carefully gathered 20 bones and skull fragments into a neat heap, and promised to segregate the bones as they dug so they could be reburied

Turkey Spurns Russian Demands, Breach Threatened

CRISIS LOOMS OVER BRITISH, FRENCH PACTS

Refusal to Close Black Sea, Cancel Military Treaties Arouse Soviet Anger.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Turkey's 16-year friendship with Russia is now at stake in negotiations at Moscow, it was understood today.

Turkey was reported in well-informed diplomatic quarters to have rejected two Russian demands:

1. That Turkey close the Dardanelles to the British and French fleets to keep them from operating in the Black sea.

2. That Turkey cancel a provision in its draft treaties with Great Britain and France by which Britain and France would aid Turkey if it became involved in war while assisting any Balkan state in resisting aggression.

The view taken in diplomatic quarters was that Russia was now seeking openly to dominate the Balkans and that Turkey was resisting stoutly.

A Daily Herald dispatch from Istanbul said today that Turkey seemed firmly determined to oppose by every means German or Russian dictatorship in the Balkans. An official Turkish spokesman was quoted as saying that the negotiations now going on at Moscow could not change Turkey's determination, reaffirmed after the start of the European war, to aid by Britain and France.

Russia's demand that Turkey close the Dardanelles was taken here to mean that Russia sought every safeguard against the possibility that she might find herself aligned against Turkey if Josef Stalin decided to throw Russia into the war.

With the Dardanelles open, the British and French fleets could not only send assistance to Rumania but would be able to blockade the mouth of the Danube river, thus closing one trade artery leading to Germany, but—if Russia entered the war—might be able to bombard Russian Black sea ports.

Russia's second demand was interpreted as meaning that Turkey desired to disinterest herself in the Balkans on the Black sea side and concentrate her interests in the Eastern Mediterranean, thereby giving Russia a free hand to intervene in Rumania, recover the Bessarabian area which Rumania received from her after the World war, possibly control the Bukovina area of northern Rumania, and compel Rumania to restore also the Dobrudja area which she acquired after the Balkan war preceding the World war.

PLAN EXAMS FOR O. S. R. GUARDS

Civil Service Quiz to be Held Late In November.

Examinations for guards for the Ohio penitentiary, the London prison farm and the Ohio State reformatory here will be held late in November, the exact date to be set later, it was announced in Columbus today by Miss Gertrude Barnes, chairman of the state civil service commission.

Guard applicants who failed in the examination which Warden Frank D. Henderson gave last week to some 320 men will not be excluded from taking the civil service tests, according to Miss Barnes. That examination had no official standing.

The commission has not decided whether the tests for London and Mansfield guards will be given in Columbus or in those cities, according to Miss Jones.

FACING PRISON

Physicians, Barber, Nurse Plead Guilty to Abortion Charges.

AKRON —(U.P.)— Two Hudson physicians, a barber and a practical nurse will be sentenced next Tuesday by Common Pleas Judge D. Fritch on abortion charges growing out of the death of a 24-year-old beauty parlor operator.

Just as the four were to go on trial in connection with the death of Miss Dorothy Metzner, last June 1, their counsel asked the court to permit them to plead guilty.

DEMS WIN IN CIVIL SERVICE FIGHT BUT—

Columbus Observers Believe They're None Too Anxious for Nov. 7 Referendum.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Despite a victory in the Ohio supreme court, the Democrats today appeared none too eager to put the civil service referendum on the Nov. 7 ballot.

Their lack of enthusiasm for placing the recently-enacted legislation before the voters for approval or rejection has a two-fold reason, informed sources said.

First, the civil service issue would be crowded into obscurity by the fight over the Bigelow old age pension amendment.

Second, if held over until the November, 1940, election, the civil service controversy could be used by the Democrats as ammunition in their fight to recapture control of the state administration from the Republicans.

The supreme court in a 4 to 3 decision held yesterday that the merit system reorganization act was not in effect and ousted Herbert N Mitchell who had been appointed to a third seat on the civil service commission by Gov. John W. Bricker under provisions of the legislation.

The objective of the sponsors of the referendum—Democratic state headquarters and the provisional state employes association—was to nullify the act, the supreme court's decision staying operation of the legislation partly marks achievement of their goal, so they can afford to sit back and wait.

Democratic State Chairman Arthur L. Limbach and H. T. Chapman, secretary of the employes' association, declared today it was too late for a referendum this November.

Mails Out Petitions.

Secretary of State Earl H. Griffith, however, contended there was sufficient time. Within an hour after the court handed down its ruling, he had mailed the Limbach-Chapman referendum petitions to county election boards for a check on the validity of 146,000 signatures. The boards were requested to return the signatures by Monday, although the law allows them 30 days.

It was Griffith who precipitated the litigation decided yesterday when he threw out approximately 7,000 signatures as invalid, rejected the referendum petition as insufficient and declared the civil service act had become law.

The supreme court found that he acted without authority, holding that determination of the validity of signatures was the duty of election boards.

GIVEN 30 DAYS

Ashland State Highway Employe Draws Suspension.

ASHLAND — A 30-day suspension effective Saturday has been imposed on Robert S. Greenlun, route marking superintendent, it was announced here at headquarters of Division 3 of the State Highway department.

Greenlun only recently was reinstated to his post abolished by former director of highways Ivan R. Ault. Ault abolished the post which Greenlun held after the latter testified against him in a case held at Mt. Vernon in which Ault was on trial for political activities during the administration of former Governor Davey.

Greenlun was restored to his post after winning a suit filed in the Franklin county court of common pleas.

The new suspension was given for "disciplinary" purposes, it was stated.

JOBS FOR ALL!

Sherwood Would Put All State Prisoners to Work.

Finding jobs for every inmate in the Ohio State reformatory will be the problem which will face Supt. Arthur L. Glattke if State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood's plan for putting all prisoners in Ohio penal institutions to work goes through.

Back in Columbus today after inspecting the federal reformatory at Chillicothe yesterday, Sherwood said he hoped the state would be able to follow the example set by that institution and put all men to work.

"But the job is difficult," he added "You've got to be careful or prison labor will be competing with private industry."

Glattke, who made the trip with Sherwood and heads of other state penal institutions, said he had no comment to make, saying it was "all up to the director."

Cites Importance of Early Discovery In Cancer Cases

The important step in the treatment of cancer is the early discovery of the malady and an analysis of the case, Dr. L. A. Pomeroy of Cleveland said last night in a lecture before about 150 north central Ohio physicians at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Dr. Pomeroy was one of the lecturers at the second session of the Ohio Medical association's regional post-graduate school.

"The medical profession is doing a good job of educating the public to the value of early treatment and periodic examination for cancer," Dr. Pomeroy said.

"Treatment should be individualized, since there are many different types of cancer which require different handling," he added.

The other lecturer was Dr. Joseph D. Heiman of Cincinnati who discussed women's diseases and their treatment.

Dr. Mabel Emery, Mansfield, chairman of the committee in charge of the postgraduate course, presided at the session.

ROUTS BURGLAR

Woman Awakened by Light, Sees Intruder Flee With $40.

Mrs. J. R. Logsdon, 42 Willow street, was awakened last night by a light in her bedroom—the beam from a flashlight, she said.

She called to her husband and the figure of a man rushed down the stairs and out through the kitchen. Mrs. Logsdon discovered her purse containing $40 missing. Logsdon called the police.

Officers searching the backyard found the purse with the contents scattered on the ground, apparently tossed away by the thief, in his flight, but the $40 was missing.

Mrs. Logsdon, who said she had left the rear door unlocked, reported that the downstairs of the house also had been ransacked.

'Scalpers' Check Losses, Plug For Red Victory Today

CINCINNATI — (U.P.) — Bucky Walters and the Cincinnati Reds had no more fervent backers for success against the Yankees today than world series ticket brokers.

Loss of the first game Wednesday by the Reds put a heavy crimp in the business of ticket speculation on games at Crosley Field, the brokers reported.

"We will be lucky to make expenses," one scalper said. "The only chance for a pickup is for the Reds to win in New York today."

The scalpers reported bad luck from all directions, including competition from "amateurs" lucky enough to have obtained tickets from the ball club.

"These people have started out to do some scalping themselves and when we try to buy our supply of tickets from them they ask unreasonable prices," a professional broker said.

NITRO BANDITS REVIVE WEST'S RAIDS ON BANKS

Trio of Desperadoes Hunted in Two Oklahoma Holdups, Kidnaping Case.

(By Associated Press)

PICHER, Okla.—Thre desperadoes revived Oklahoma's riproarin' bank banditry days with a sensational threat to blow up a Picher bank with nitroglycerine after kidnaping a salesman and holding him captive more than 40 hours.

The $1,195 hold of the First State bank here and another at Webbers Falls were the first in 19 months in Oklahoma—once the scene of almost daily raids by such dare-devils as Pretty Boy Floyd.

Yesterday they sent their leader, a 25-year-old blond, to rob the Picher bank while a second stood outside and a third held Quirk hostage 17 miles away.

The blond youth demanded of Clarence Miller, bank employe:

"Do you know what nitroglycerine is?"

Miller, bewildered, turned to Constable Clarence (Blondie) McLanahan, who had just walked in, and repeated the question.

Without waiting for a reply, the bandit pulled out a bottle partially filled with a colorless liquid and announced:

"Well, you know what it is now."

He quickly disarmed the constable, lined up him, Miller and three customers and demanded $5,000 from Cashier W. A. Brewer "or I'll blow this place sky-high."

Brewer shoved out a stack of bills, meantime pushing $4,000 in currency into a wastebasket.

The youth grabbed the money, fled to a waiting car and returned to Quirk. The salesman said "he threatened to shoot me with a big .45 but I protested I hadn't done anything so they decided just to tie me up in my automobile.

"I had a penknife and managed to get it and cut myself loose."

The first meeting of the Mansfield section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers for 1939-40 was held in the Chamber of Commerce room last night with 68 members present. A representative of the Ohio Bell Telephone company showed motion pictures which depicted various phases of communication service.

TENSE WORLD WAITS HITLER SPEECH FRIDAY

for either peace or war" and that the choice is up to Great Britain.

Although neither France nor the French attitude toward the war was mentioned, newspapers prominently displayed an alleged order of the British admiralty to British merchant ships to "ram every German submarine."

That Germany was not in a hurry to start operations in the west was indicated by this morning's high army command communique which told yesterday's war story in two sentences.

In the west, it said, "there was only minor artillery and scouting plane activity."

In the east, it reported continuation of "the cleansing which began yesterday in the region of the Vistula of shattered remnants of Polish troops."

Reports Bremen Back In Germany.

BERLIN—(AP)—The newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung reported today that the crew of the German liner Bremen—more than 900 men—returned to Bremerhaven last Friday after docking the ship in a neutral port.

The newspaper did not identify the neutral port but said the Bremen's company along with the crew of the steamship Iller reached Bremerhaven on the steamship Sierra Cordoba. The Iller and Sierra Cordoba are both German vessels.

The homecoming seamen were given a cheering reception and the Bremen's captain, Adolf Aberns, was promoted to commodore by order of Adolf Hitler.

(The latest report on the whereabouts of the Bremen, said she was in Murmansk, Russian Arctic port.)

France Cripples German Industry.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN GERMANY—(U.P.)—The French army's cautious, methodical, downhill advance in the Saar Valley has paralyzed $1,000,000 worth of German industry there.

There are many German soldiers below, hidden in pill boxes and behind artillery emplacements, but no civilian life. No smoke pours from any chimney of the big factories where Germany's best steel has been made. There isn't an industrial wheel turning in the whole region from Mertzig past Saarlouis (Saarlautern), Dillingen, Voelklingen, Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken to Pirmasens, at the edge of the great Palatinate forest, which is a dark blur on the eastern horizon.

Bite by bite, the French are biting off more German territory west of the Saar river, and adding it to the 58,000 acres they claim already to hold. The advance is slow but general. I saw a sample of it yesterday.

French tanks charged through and beyond the Borg forest in the Moselle valley, a few miles inside Germany. German tanks went to meet them. For hours, these monsters battled at close range among the trees, firing shells point blank. There were no supporting infantry, no protecting airplanes. One by one, tanks fell out of the fight, their armor plate blown away, their crews dead. The French tanks finally emerged victorious on the eastern side of the forest.

Holds Nazis See Way To Cross Belgium.

BRUSSELS —(U.P.)— The Belga news agency reported from Berlin today that under certain circumstances Germany would consider herself released from her neutrality pledge to Belgium.

The circumstances which might release Germany from her neutrality pledge, the Belga agency said, included inability of a neutral country to prevent effectively continuous air incursions by belligerents.

It was pointed out here that Belgium believes she already has sufficiently proved both her capacity and willingness to prevent air violations of her neutrality.

Several Brussels newspapers speculated whether Germany was attempting to find a pretext under which she could denounce her neutrality pledges to Belgium and Holland.

Germany, as well as the Allied powers, formally assured Belgium, Holland and Switzerland before the war started that the neutrality of the small nations would be respected if they themselves maintained a neutral attitude.

France Backs Up British War Stand.

PARIS — French public opinion today appeared solidly behind the declaration of Premier Edouard Daladier that France will stand steadfast beside England in prosecuting the war to "destroy not only Nazism, but the German spirit of domination."

At the same time, it appeared that French authorities, like the English, would give serious consideration to any peace proposals advanced by Chancellor Hitler when he addresses the reichstag tomorrow.

But, it appeared, unless these proposals conform to the French war aims, there is little chance of their acceptance.

Meanwhile the warfare on the western front remained relatively static as the military forces in the Maginot and Siegfried lines were held in check until the German "peace offensive" is either rejected or brings an end to the European war.

Today's military communique, No. 63, stated:

"There was intermittent artillery action on various points of the front."

Here's Equipment Mansfielders Saw as Army Unit Visited City

GRANDPA'S EYES WOULD POP NOW

The detachment, in charge of Major E. N. Harmon, made a swing around Ohio in behalf of an enlistment drive. Recruiting officers, with the familiar arm band, wer stationed in the crowd, to give information to young men who might be inspired by those officers in snappy uniforms and the marching music of the infantry band, to join the army.

In fact, it took the spectator back 22 years to see a recruiting officer approach a young man and say: "Buddy, wouldn't you like to sign up?"

Major Harmon said that the present recruiting program is not, as many people believe, a preamble to war, but a move to bring the regular army up to the peace-time strength prescribed by the National Defense act of 1920. The peace-time army should be 277,000, he said, whereas the regular army was decreased to 165,000 several years ago as an economy measure.

And while the regular army unit displayed the modern equipment which is a part of Uncle Sam's "adequate defense" program, the Mansfield unit of the National Guard, Battery D, 134th Field Artillery, made hay, too. At a tent set up in the park, in charge of Capt. R. J. Nichols of the battery, there was a line-up of young men asking for information.

Of eight who applied Tuesday night, five were accepted and yesterday noon two more applications were received.

20 Pupils Chosen to Arrange Programs Over Senior High Public Address System.

Students at Senior high school will turn to the production of radio plays in the near future by arranging programs for the school's public address system.

A committee of 20 students, representative of the various departments at the school, was named today by Miss Margaret Tinsley, history teacher, to work on the new project.

In addition to presenting plays and programs, the group will sponsor radio skits by other groups and also will make a study of the radio, Miss Tinsley said.

The plan calls for the group to present programs throughout the year in which all students and clubs will be asked to take part. Two programs already are planned for November. One will be presented on election day and the other will be built around birthdays of famous men during the month.

GYROS RECEIVE 'MANY HAPPY RETURNS' AT BIRTHDAY DINNER

"Many happy returns of the day" and best wishes for more birthdays were extended to the Mansfield Gyro club last night by other Ohio clubs and district and international officials of the organization, as the club marked its 15th anniversary of its founding with a dinner at Westbrook Country club.

Added to a 100 per cent attendance of Mansfield club were guests of members, former Gyros and delegations from Cleveland, Columbus and Dayton.

Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, who was a charter member of the Mansfield club, recalled some incidents of the early days—among them the 12-cyclinder car the club acquired to make a trip to the Denver convention, but had to give up because the car broke down on a little jaunt around Central park and the bowling team that won the international tournament.

"There was never any material gain from membership in Gyro," he said, "but there was an immeasurable gain in friendship, which cannot be measured by material standards.

Best wishes were extended to the Mansfield club by Glen Carmen, president of the Cleveland club, by Dr. Arthur Knoderer, of the Dayton club, and lieutenant-governor of Ohio and by Joseph Hirshberger, for the Columbus club. Hirshberger is a former district governor.

Ed L. Kagy, one of the three founders of Gyro and now international secretary-treasurer was the final speaker.

He urged the Mansfield club to carry on in the future as it has in the past 15 years, on the basis of friendship, the club's motto.

"The finest service is the giving and maintenance of friendship," Kagy said, "and the Mansfield club will prosper and grow if its members will pledge to each other an intelligent and tolerant understanding."

Earl B. Rawson, a charter member of the Mansfield club, and present secretary, introduced Kagy and Kalbfleisch. R. D. Lindsay, president of the club, presided.

Members and guests played golf in the afternoon, with prizes in the blind bogey tournament going to Dr. D. M. Leuthner, Mansfield guest and Harry O'Donnell, Cleveland, tied for first; Roy Brokaw, Columbus and Warrie Foden, Cleveland, tied for second, and G. E. Kalbfleisch and Dr. Frank Watson, tied for third.

PASTOR EXPERT HUNTER

YAKIMA, Wash. — (U.P.) — This city has a pastor, the Rev. E. D. Hornschuch, who has 63 notches on his hunting rifle for the number of deer he has killed. There are several other deeper notches on the weapon's stock representing elk and bear he has bagged.

ORGANIZE CLUB TO FIND JOBS

Cleveland Y. M. C. A. Develops System for Unemployed, Gets Rapid Results.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—The Young Men's Christian Association here has developed an organization of unemployed men who, in their quest for jobs for themselves, find work for each other.

The group, whose membership averages 600 to 800 men is directed by Victor Girfin, 56-year-old Y. M. C. A. employment chief who has been helping Y. M. C. A. men find jobs for 20 years.

Called the Job Finder's Club, the organization has obtained an average of 2,000 positions a year for the 3,500 to 3,700 men who seek Girfin's help annually in their hunt for work.

Girfin describes the club as a "cooperative group of job hunters who buoy the spirits of each other and themselves by helping the other fellow all the time.

Jobs usually obtained by leads found in the job seekers' daily search are clerical, sales, office, stenographic, bookkeeping and accounting and sometimes skilled machinists. Applicants are high school graduates and sometimes college graduates with special training.

During the winters, the club holds monthly meetings, always attended by some employed men and usually by a few employers. Here the members, with 150 to 200 participating, discuss their problems and exchange ideas.

A former member, who has risen to success, presides at the meetings.

Girfin says the club was founded because of the axiom that "necessity is the mother of invention." It was in March, 1931, at the ebb of the depression that a group of idle work seekers were in Girfin's office discussing the futility of their search.

Kentucky Senator?

•Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky, above, looms as the successor to the late Senator M. M. Logan who died suddenly in Washington. It was predicted that Chandler will resign as governor and be succeeded by Keen Johnson, Kentucky's present lieutenant-governor. Chandler, political circles say, would then be appointed senator.

AGE AND YOUTH SEEN AT ODDS

Illinois Economist Foresees Approach of Class Struggle By 1980.

CHAMPAIGN-URBANA, Ill. — (U.P.)—Dr. Frank S. Dickinson, University of Illinois economist, foresees the approach of a class struggle between age and youth.

He said in an address before the Western Underwriters' association at White Sulphur Springs, Va., that the "war of the pensionnaires" would unfold as a problem "far more demanding" than the oft-discussed conflict between capital and labor.

Dr. Dickinson said the decreasing birth rate and the increasing life span were causes behind the "struggle of classes in America." But he said he does not expect the struggle to become critical until 1980, when, he estimated, there will be 35,000,000 persons in the U. S. more than 65 years of age.

He visioned as possible results of what he predicted would be "the greatest cultural and social change since the fall of Rome" the following:

Pension-taxation claiming one-fourth the income of workers and employers.

Destruction of the two major political parties.

GALION — Mrs. B. E. Harter was dismissed from the Good Samaritan hospital Wednesday.

TENSE WORLD WAITS HITLER SPEECH FRIDAY

for either peace or war" and that the choice is up to Great Britain.

Although neither France nor the French attitude toward the war was mentioned, newspapers prominently displayed an alleged order of the British admiralty to British merchant ships to "ram every German submarine."

That Germany was not in a hurry to start operations in the west was indicated by this morning's high army command communique which told yesterday's war story in two sentences.

In the west, it said, "there was only minor artillery and scouting plane activity."

In the east, it reported continuation of "the cleansing which began yesterday in the region of the Vistula of shattered remnants of Polish troops."

Reports Bremen Back In Germany.

BERLIN—(AP)—The newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung reported today that the crew of the German liner Bremen—more than 900 men—returned to Bremerhaven last Friday after docking the ship in a neutral port.

The newspaper did not identify the neutral port but said the Bremen's company along with the crew of the steamship Iller reached Bremerhaven on the steamship Sierra Cordoba. The Iller and Sierra Cordoba are both German vessels.

The homecoming seamen were given a cheering reception and the Bremen's captain, Adolf Aberns, was promoted to commodore by order of Adolf Hitler.

(The latest report on the whereabouts of the Bremen, said she was in Murmansk, Russian Arctic port.)

France Cripples German Industry.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN GERMANY—(U.P.)—The French army's cautious, methodical, downhill advance in the Saar Valley has paralyzed $1,000,000 worth of German industry there.

One can stand at a French front line observation post, dug in just across the crest overlooking 10 miles of valley, and see no signs of life.

There are many German soldiers below, hidden in pill boxes and behind artillery emplacements, but no civilian life. No smoke pours from any chimney of the big factories where Germany's best steel has been made. There isn't an industrial wheel turning in the whole region from Mertzig past Saarlouis (Saarlautern), Dillingen, Voelklingen, Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken to Pirmasens, at the edge of the great Palatinate forest, which is a dark blur on the eastern horizon.

Bite by bite, the French are biting off more German territory west of the Saar river, and adding it to the 88,000 acres they claim already to hold. The advance is slow but general. I saw a sample of it yesterday.

French tanks charged through and beyond the Borg forest in the Moselle valley, a few miles inside Germany. German tanks went to meet them. For hours, these monsters battled at close range among the trees, firing shells point blank. There were no supporting infantry, no protecting airplanes. One by one, tanks fell out of the fight, their armor plate blown away, their crews dead. The French tanks finally emerged victorious on the eastern side of the forest.

Holds Nazis See Way To Cross Belgium.

BRUSSELS —(U.P.)— The Belgian news agency reported from Berlin today that under certain circumstances Germany would consider herself released from her neutrality pledge to Belgium.

The circumstances which might release Germany from her neutrality pledge, the Belga agency said, included inability of a neutral country to prevent effectively continuous air incursions by belligerents.

It was pointed out here that Belgium believes she already has sufficiently proved both her capacity and willingness to prevent air violations of her neutrality.

Several Brussels newspapers speculated whether Germany was attempting to find a pretext under which she could denounce her neutrality pledges to Belgium and Holland.

Germany, as well as the Allied powers, formally assured Belgium, Holland and Switzerland before the war started that the neutrality of the small nations would be respected if they themselves maintained a neutral attitude.

France Backs Up British War Stand.

PARIS — French public opinion today appeared solidly behind the declaration of Premier Edouard Daladier that France will stand steadfast beside England in prosecuting the war to "destroy not only Nazism, but the German spirit of domination."

At the same time, it appeared that French authorities, like the English, would give serious consideration to any peace proposals advanced by Chancellor Hitler when he addresses the reichstag tomorrow.

But, it appeared, unless these proposals conform to the French war aims, there is little chance of their acceptance.

Meanwhile the warfare on the western front remained relatively static as the military forces in the Maginot and Siegfried lines were held in check until the German "peace offensive" is either rejected or brings an end to the European war.

Today's military communique, No. 63, stated:

"There was intermittent artillery action on various points of the front."

Here's Equipment Mansfielders Saw as Army Unit Visited City

GRANDPA'S EYES WOULD POP NOW

The detachment, in charge of Major E. N. Harmon, made a swing around Ohio in behalf of an enlistment drive. Recruiting officers, with the familiar arm band, wer stationed in the crowd, to give information to young men who might be inspired by those officers in snappy uniforms and the marching music of the infantry band, to join the army.

In fact, it took the spectator back 22 years to see a recruiting officer approach a young man and say: "Buddy, wouldn't you like to sign up?"

Major Harmon said that the present recruiting program is not, as many people believe, a preamble to war, but a move to bring the regular army up to the peace-time strength prescribed by the National Defense act of 1920. The peace-time army should be 277,000, he said, whereas the regular army was decreased to 165,000 several years ago as an economy measure.

And while the regular army unit displayed the modern equipment which is a part of Uncle Sam's "adequate defense" program, the Mansfield unit of the National Guard, Battery D, 134th Field Artillery, made hay, too. At a tent set up in the park, in charge of Capt. R. J. Nichols of the battery, there was a line-up of young men asking for information.

Of eight who applied Tuesday night, five were accepted and yesterday noon two more applications were received.

STORY OF NEXT WAR UNFOLDED IN NEW NOVEL

'Arrogant History of White Ben' Among Library's Fiction Additions.

A fantastic creature of imagination is the major character around which a story of the next war is built in Clemence Dane's new novel which heads the list of fiction this week at the Public library.

ARROGANT HISTORY OF WHITE BEN is a novel of a dictator who hates crows and persecutes anyone who reminds him of a crow. Near the end of the next war the story takes place, with a scare-crow in an English garden assuming the form and attributes of a man because a child has hidden a mandrake root in his straw breast. White Ben Campion becomes the leader of the people, and Miss Dane's talent makes his actions convincing.

THE PRIORY by Dorothy Whipple is a long novel of present-day English life, depicting a country family whose estate, The Priory, is rapidly going to pieces for the lack of cash. The book conveys very effectively a sense of the old house and what it meant to the various persons connected with it.

DAYS BEFORE LENT by Hamilton Basso is the story of young Dr. Jason Kent of New Orleans, who choses between a high-salaried position enabling him to marry the girl he loves, and a research career in far-off India. He decides during Mardi Gras week.

Four other novels are on the list of new books this week. They are:

EASTWARD IN EDEN, Garth
MYSTERIOUS RANCHO, Gregory
TRAGEDY IN E FLAT, Gribble
THREE WERE THOROUGHBREDS, Perkins

Biography of Amelia.

SOARING WINGS is a biography of Amelia Earhart by her husband George Palmer Putnam. It "does not record in prim chronology those external events of a life already well known, but rather seeks to capture the spirit which shone through the lesser adventures encountered in her pursuit of happiness." Putnam shows this young woman as a human being, gallant, independent, sensitive, eager, thoughtful and gay.

OLD SANTA FE TRAIL is a trip over the trail to Santa Fe, personally conducted by the author of "Kit Carson," Stanley Vestal. The days of wagon trains and veteran frontiersmen live again, and we learn something of the many difficulties men encountered on the trail.

FOREIGN POLICY IN THE MAKING by Carl Joachim Friedrich, professor of government, Harvard university, outlines the pattern of democratic foreign policy in post-war Europe. It deals with the change brought about in the practice of diplomacy, showing the steps in the search for a new balance of power.

Other non-fiction added to the library shelves this week are:

SHOWDOWN IN VIENNA, Fuchs
HEAD WIND: STORY OF ROBERT LORAINE, Loraine
JEAN SIBELIUS, Ekman
SCIENCE AND MUSIC, Jeans
AMERICAN JAZZ MUSIC, Hobson
JEWISH MUSIC, Idelsohn
ARMIES OF SPIES, Gollomb
BAGHDAD SKETCHES, Stark
STENDHAL, Green
MY DAYS OF STRENGTH, Fearn
JUGHEADS BEHIND THE HEADLINES, Noble & Coates
PAGAN CROSS, Helprin
BERMUDA AND THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, 1760-1783, Kerr
BUILDING MINNESOTA, Blegen

SPEECHLESS, UNABLE TO MOVE, BUT HE SURVIVES 2,300 VOLTS

STILLWATER, Okla. — (U.P.) — Speechless and unable to move, was the way C. M. Lane, 43, a linesman, describes his experience of receiving a 2,300 volt shock.

Lane accidentally came into contact with a live wire while atop a 30-foot pole. Quick thinking by Charles McKenzie and Albert Ernst, fellow workers, was credited with saving Lane's life.

The men are employes of the Stillwater Municipal Light and Power company. Lane, recovering from body burns, told this story of the incident:

"I knew what I was into immediately, but I couldn't call out and I couldn't turn loose. I felt as if I were swelling and choking. I could think of what I wanted to do, but I couldn't do it.

"I wanted to buckle my legs and get away from that wire, but I couldn't move. It's a pretty bad feeling to be able to think but not act.

"Then," Lane continued, "I heard my helper (Ernst), who was on the ground, yell: 'Hey, your breeches are on fire.'

"I tried to answer him and tell him to get help, but I couldn't get any words out. Soon, however, I saw McKenzie coming on the run. (McKenzie was working on another pole 125 feet away.)

"By that time I must have become a little groggy. I do remember hearing the helper on the ground yell, 'His safety belt is broken.' When I heard that I knew very well that it wasn't my safety belt that had broken, but that McKenzie had cut it to let me down. About the time they started letting me down, I passed out."

McKenzie and others filled in the rest of the story.

McKenzie unhooked his own safety belt, climbed down from his pole and ran to the Lane pole. At the top of the Lane pole he threw a rope around Lane, lassoed the cross-beam on the pole, then cut Lane's safety belt. With the aid of the rope he let the then unconscious Lane safely to the ground where he was given first aid, then taken to a hospital.

ON BLOCK AGAIN

5 Lots to Be Offered For Sale Second Time by County.

The county will make a second attempt Saturday to sell five lots in the Crystal Springs allotment at sheriff's sale for $72 in delinquent taxes and penalties.

Offered previously on a foreclosure judgment against Mike Schuff and others, the properties failed to attract bidders. The lots, all vacant, were appraised at $15 each, or a total of $75.

County Hikes Offer to $50,000 on W. Fourth Project

MEETS STATE DEMAND WITH RESERVATIONS

Agrees If It Can Finance Job on 5-Year Basis, Get Aid on 9 Smaller Projects.

Richland county commissioners agreed today to contribute $50,000 to the proposed $660,000 grade elimination project west of Mansfield on the condition that the amount be paid in five annual installments and the state helps to finance nine other smaller projects in the county.

In making the offer, the commissioners boosted their contribution from $20,000 and complied with the minimum request of the state highway department for a county contribution to the project.

It was understood that the state highway department would attempt to set up the grade project for next year's program if the county agreed to give $50,000 to help finance the work.

The state, however, had requested financing of the project over a three-year period, and the county's five-year proposal may meet with opposition on that basis

The state has agreed to share the cost of a new bridge on North Main street in Mansfield and a few other small jobs on state routes in the county.

Doubts 5-Year Plan.

Murray D. Shaffer, Ashland division state highway engineer, expressed doubt that the highway department would be able to finance the $600,000 project on a five-year basis.

"If the state can arrange to handle it on that basis and approves the county's $50,000 offer, the grade elimination is assured and work would probably start about next July," Shaffer said.

In their letter to the state highway department today, the commissioners said: "If this proposal is acceptable to the state, it is the opinion of the commissioners that the money spent will benefit all the citizens of Richland county, and we are further of the opinion that the financing of the county's share can be accomplished without serious detriment to the maintenance of the county roads."

Commissioners had explained their reluctance to give $50,000 to the project by pointing to the large outlay of road funds the county has made in the past two years and the fact that the road fund is virtually depleted.

The nine other projects the commissioners want included in their $50,000 offer are:

1. A concrete bridge on North Main street in the city.
2. Improvement of route 95 from Butler south to the county line.
3. Improvement of route 13 north from Five Points.
4. Construction of a bridge on route 61.
5. Improvement of the West Main street road from Shelby to Bucyrus and Tiro.
6. Construction of roads in the Muskingum Conservancy district.
7. Construction of a bridge on route 39 east of Lucas.
8. Construction of a bridge on route 39 north between Mansfield and Springmill.
9. Improvement of the Lexington-Fredericktown highway south to the Hannawalt bridge.

U. S. Patrols Sea From Florida to S. America

Up and Down THE STREET

It's two months and a half until Christmas but patrolmen at the Mansfield State Highway Patrol sub-station were in festive mood today because of gifts from the state. Each received a steel locker for his own personal use. The lockers are six feet high and are large enough to hold the personal property of each officer.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Shellhaas, Ashland road, drove to Canton recently to attend a meeting of the Methodist quarterly conference, but their return wasn't as easy. And it wasn't because of an auto accident. While Mr. Shellhaas waited in the downtown section of Canton for Mrs. Shellhaas who had gone into a store, a pickpocket relieved him not only of $30 in currency, but his new drivers' license. Rather than take a chance of driving without a license, they had friends bring them home.

Halloween pranksters are not going to get away with their early October celebrating and destruction of property this year, Sheriff E P. Long warned today. "There's a limit to this celebrating business and the next boy or girl we catch deliberately destroying property is going to be arrested and brought to the county detention home," he said "Then we're going to bring in the parents and hold them responsible for the damage, and see if that won't curb this foolishness."

Because of the little "trouble" across the pond, Clifford Sherrard will not be able to go deer hunting this fall. Sherrard, now up in Canada, made elaborate preparations to divide his belated vacation between fishing and hunting. But the hunting's out. The deer country he planned to visit is 200 miles from his fishing base, and his intentions to fly to the spot were vetoed by the dominion government which has grounded all private planes due to the war. The trip to the site through the densely wooded route by lumber train would have taken two days.

CITY MOVES TO SELL TAX BONDS

Asks Bids on $25,000 Issue Against Delinquent Taxes to Raise Relief Funds.

The city of Mansfield took steps today to sell $25,000 in delinquent tax bonds to raise additional relief funds after the sinking fund trustees declined to purchase the issue because of lack of funds.

City Auditor Paul L. Kelley said that sealed proposals would be received at his office until 1 p. m. Friday, Oct. 27, on the sale of the bonds which are to be issued against the anticipated collection of delinquent taxes.

Authorized by city council last month, provisions call for the issuance of 25 bonds of $1,000 denomination at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent and payable semi-annually on the first day of April and October.

The city is seeking the money to match state funds which would provide a total of $50,000 to meet relief needs for the next three months and retire a debt of approximately $14,000 now owed merchants for food, fuel and clothing supplied indigents on the relief rolls.

Meanwhile Kelley announced that the city's relief fund was boosted to $4,600 with receipt from the state of a monthly allocation of $1,692 for its share of the relief costs for August.

DRIVER IN FATAL CRASH BOUND OVER, $50,000 DAMAGES SOUGHT

A fatal traffic accident last Saturday in East Mansfield had resulted today in the filing of a $50,000 damage suit in common pleas court and the holding of the driver of one of the three cars involved in the crash for grand jury action on a manslaughter charge.

The damage suit was filed by Wilbert Goon, 32, Mansfield, seriously injured in the crash, and the husband of Mrs. Ethel Goon, 28, who was instantly killed in the accident.

Bernabe Richardson, 44, of New York city, driver of one of the automobiles pleaded innocent in municipal court today to second degree manslaughter and was bound to the grand jury under $2,500 bond. He was held in the county jail while he attempted to raise bond.

Named in the damage action were Nicholas Vale Quintero, owner of the car which Richardson was driving, and Vernon Fowler of Jeromesville, driver of the car which collided head-on with the one in which Mr. and Mrs. Goon were riding.

In his action, Goon seeks damages for the death of Mrs. Goon and injuries he received in the crash. Both Fowler and Goon are still in the Mansfield General hospital. Goon's six-year-old daughter, and Hugh Hootman of Jeromesville were less seriously hurt in the accident.

Goon contends that Richardson, operating Quintero's car, pulled away from a filling station into the path of Fowler's car without signaling to Fowler. When Fowler's car sideswiped the one operated by Richardson it swerved into the path of the Goon machine, headed the other way.

The suit contends that Fowler was driving at a dangerous rate of speed. The action was filed by Attys. Voegele, Hutchison and Schettler.

In his action, Goon also sought to attach Quintero's car, but Quintero left the city last night in the automobile before the suit was filed. Quintero, a South American, is said to be the owner of a radio station in Venezuela.

NAVAL BOMBERS SENT ON DAWN TO DARK WATCH

Cover Half Million Square Miles in Surveillance of Panama Canal Zone.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—United States airmen are flying the Panama Canal neutrality patrol today over an area of more than half a million square miles of salt water.

The estimate was that a dozen naval bombers were patroling from dawn to dark the southern tip of Florida to the northern coast of South America. That patrol would cover the Caribbean sea which Atlantic shipping must enter en route to the canal.

The canal patrol was undertaken, The United Press was informed, at the outset of the European war and does not represent a development of the Panama declaration in which the 21 American Republics agreed this week to establish a safety zone around the western hemisphere.

Therefore, it a patrol of surveillance rather than one designed to prevent hostile acts beyond the strict limits of our territorial waters.

Naval planes aloft over the Spanish Main are based at Puerto Rico where Admiral William H. Leahy, retired chief of naval operations, has just taken over as governor. Puerto Rican development is to be undertaken to make that territory a formidable outpost in canal defense of which the naval patrol is a vital part.

Vision Canal Attack.

Some naval officers long have believed that in the modern era of undeclared wars an enemy might be expected to strike at the canal first and announce its hostility afterward. It is desirable for that reason among others that the United States be familiar with the shipping converging on the canal and, especially, be aware of trysts at sea which might take place among foreign vessels.

The Patrol from Puerto Rico was described as an outer curtain of surveillance. A similar operation, based on the United States naval station at Guantanamo, Cuba, was reported to provide a second line of aerial observation covering the Gulf of Mexico area westward toward the canal.

Trusties Who Fled Honor Camp Returned to O. S. R.

Two Ohio State reformatory trusties captured yesterday following their escape from the Osborn honor camp near Sandusky, where they were sent last Saturday, were back in the institution today.

The fugitives were Kenneth Van Horn, 18, captured by Sandusky police, and Robert Tate, 19, apprehended by Fremont authorities. They walked away from the Osborn honor camp yesterday morning.

Dispatches from Sandusky said both were encountered on a downtown street by police and started to run. Van Horn was captured and taken to police headquarters where he tried to escape but was overpowered.

Tate stole an automobile and after running through a police blockade set up at the outskirts of the city was captured by Fremont officers.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Why Do Those Who Believe In Communism Object to Being Called Communists?

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—I have never been able to figure out why persons who have denounced Fascism and Naziism but have openly proclaimed a resolve never to say a word against Communism, holding it to be the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment, should resent being called Communists.

If I thought Communism was the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment I would not only join the Comunist party but insist on being known as a Communist. I would refuse to be carried on the secret rolls of the party and would scorn the role of fellow-traveler and the ambiguity and stealth which are self-imposed on any person who attempts to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. If such were my considered and avowed belief I would deem it no slander to be called a member of the party.

But, of course, if I did believe in Communism, I would necessarily believe also in duplicity, treachery and dissemblance for these are not faults but virtues—in fact, required traits—and that would be a complication.

It is impossible for any person who is not qualified by character to be a Communist or a Fascist or Nazi to put himself in the position of a confirmed believer and say what he would do if he were a Communist, Fascist or Nazi. It is like trying to say what one would do if one were insane.

* * *

But those who are not believers in any of these isms often face the problem of dealing fairly with individuals who have indorsed Communism and yet pose as martyrs and decry red-baiting when they are taken at their word and regarded as Communists.

Men of honest mentality believe that they themselves would proclaim their membership if they approved of Communism, forgetting that if they did so believe they would no longer value honesty. They see no wrong or harm but rather a polite acknowledgement in giving the Bolo full credit for beliefs which he has frankly stated, but often discover, to their puzzlement, that this mere acknowledgement is resented as an accusation.

If a man says, "I was drunk last night," and another says, "Oh, so you were drunk, eh?" the first one says, "Boy, I'll say I was drunk."

But if a Red says, "I regard Communism as the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment," and another man says, "Oh, a Communist, are you?" the Communist, with his weirdly erratic reasoning, sometimes replies, "Don't call me that. I'll sue you."

* * *

Of course, a certain approbrium goes with it, but that comes from within Communism itself. The very word is a monster, like a cartoonist's dragon, remindful of treachery and cunning, of sneaky parliamentary manipulation in labor unions, of vast slaughters in the mysterious Russian land, of the suppression of human rights and conscience, of the counterfeiting of the documents and money of this amiable and trusting nation by the government of Soviet Russia and of connivance, even active participation, in such traitorous indecencies by Communist leaders who are nominally Americans.

All that is included in Communism itself, and nobody who regards it as the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment is also allowed to break the package and select only a few attractive theories. They shoot men in Russia for attempting to break the package. You have to take the practices as well as the theories, and if you do accept or indorse Communism the approbrium gets on you.

* * *

A number of American Reds have attempted to unstink themselves lately, because Stalin finally acknowledged openly the obvious identity of Sovietism with Hitlerism. They seek to do this merely by renouncing Stalinism for that particular reason, but that isn't enough. They aren't renouncing Communism but just one embarrassing act by the leader.

Their approval still covers all that Communism was up to the point of this alliance so they are still Communists, if political divorcees, and Americans will be slow to accept them by their maiden names.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—While studios are looking over their vaults for old war pictures for possible re-issue, it appears that "Vigil In the Night" will be the first movie to incorporate angles on the "new world war."

This will be possible solely because of the illness and subsequent operation on the star, Carole Lombard, which delayed production on the A. J. Cronin story by five weeks.

Carole and Anne Shirley are playing nurses and sisters in the Shereham county hospital in England, and the set today is one of the dreariest masterpieces of construction imaginable.

The sunshines brightly outside, but within the sound stage a fine drizzle falls—by courtesy of overhead spraying pipes—on the brick hospital exterior past which Carole, in raincoat and galoshes, must walk. Beyond the hospital, a large miniature built in perspective shows a gray industrial skyline, with a couple of smokestacks spouting live gray steam into the dreary sky. The rain is of that soft, seemingly interminable variety, most depressing.

* * *

George Stevens, the director, has "mood music" on the sidelines to stir the actors emotionally.

The only really cheerful note apparent is the raucous, unsquelchable laughter of one C. Lombard, who looks hale and hearty and twice as beautiful as before her hospital siege. Carole is cheered, maybe, by the thought that next time she's going back to comedy.

There's real comedy, strangely, on the set of a movie with the gruesome title (to be changed) of "Send Another Coffin."

The comedy here is provided not so much by the script as by the demeanor of the actors, veterans all, who are pitted against each other in the scenes. There is thievery in progress.

* * *

This scene, for example, in which many actors share the camera—a session in a district attorney's office during which the "killer" is in process of being "unveiled." Veterans present include Pat O'Brien, Bernard Nedell, Alan Dinehart, Addison Richards, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford.

It is no coincidence, obviously, that Nedell is carrying a pair of white gloves, nice for waving in the air at appropriate moments; that cigars are being lighted, and smoke exhaled—also at appropriate moments; that shoulders are being shoved into position to dominate the camera; that Broderick Crawford, in desperation, finally get himself a fly swatter, exceptionally nice for swatting imaginary flies in the background during somebody else's camera moment.

Tay Garnett, directing all this, sees the humor in it, fortunately, as indeed do the actors. The situation resolves itself, finally, with the fly swatter's removal from the scene. But the groans that went up from the others when casting announced that Henry Armetta, the scene-stealer to end scene-stealing, would join in the fun!

It's working out nicely for Ruth Terry, the leading lady, here doing her first straight acting role after a term in 20th Century musicals. Ruth thinks "everyone is so wonderful—" and the truth is they are: they'll help a newcomer but for rivals the knife is out.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Mary drew a long, sibilant breath as I told her that she was ready for the big rehearsal of my play.

"Do you really mean that?" she asked childishly. "Do you think I may do?"

"There's no thinking about it," I returned. "I know you'll do, so please put the play and everything concerning it out of your head except for the practice I have asked. Spend the rest of the time in enjoying this little vacation which has dropped on you like manna from heaven, or its modern equivalent, whatever that may be."

"Will we ever?" Mary ejaculated fervently. "And we have you to thank for everything, I know, even the enlisting of Queen Olga to make Olina stay out."

"What's that?" Noel asked.

"Oh! you don't know that lovely chapter of the novel," his wife said. "But there's no use in taking Auntie Madge's time in hashing it over. When she has to go, I'll tell you all about it."

"You'll have that opportunity right away," I said, smiling, "for I must leave for New York almost at once."

"Look here!" Mary said, her voice suddenly sharp with anxiety. "Are you going into any danger down in New York?"

"Oh! I am sure not, Mary," I said, dovoutly hoping that I was speaking the truth, but determined to leave her unworried during my absence, no matter what was in the offing. "I am going to be with Mr. and Mrs. Underwood, and they are surely ample protection."

"Daredevils, both of 'em." Mary pronounced judgment sharply. "I suppose it isn't permitted to ask what it's all about."

"I'm afraid not, Darling," I said, reluctant to let her know that we were going on the expedition, to solve the menace hovering over Dickey.

"I suppose not," she sighed, and then she gave me another hug.

"Promise me you'll be careful, Darling," she urged me. "I don't know what I'd do if you got hurt."

"Don't waste your time worrying about impossibilities," I told her, and then with tender farewells I left them. I went swiftly to my own room, finding Lillian there waiting for me.

"Harry wanted me to pass the word to you that we're not going to the Lansfield first, but to your father's hideaway in Greenwich Village. In all probability, we'll not be going to Lansfield at all while we're in the city, so you would better take what things you need from here. I've already dipped into the sartoral supplies I keep for emergency out here, and am all ready to start."

"I will be in 15 minutes," I promised, and was able to make good my promise. I took my purse and gloves and went down the hall to my father's room. Lillian was standing outside the door, evidently waiting for me.

"Good work!" she said. "Harry is in with your father now for final instructions. Jim has the car all drawn up by the side porch and is coming up for the bags when we give him the word. Are yours ready?"

"Yes, two, outside my door," I told her, and as if Jim had been waiting for the message, he came into view from the kitchen stairs. I told him where to find my bags, and then Lillian tapped upon the door of my father's room.

Are you thinking in terms of more substantial meals now that summer is on the wane?

Curried Crabmeat is an excellent luncheon or supper dish. Recipe calls for two cups hot cooked rice, three tablespoons butter, one and one-half teaspoons minced onion, three tablespoons flour, tablespoon curry powder, one and one-half cups each chicken stock and canned crabmeat, one tablespoon lemon juice and three-fourths teaspoon salt. Cook minced onion with butter for three minutes. Add flour, salt and curry powder, stirring until smooth. Next add chicken stock and cook until thickened. Add canned crabmeat from which bones have been removed, and lemon juice. Heat and serve with hot rice. Chicken bouillon cubes or canned chicken broth may be used as stock.

Sweetbread Dish.

Here's a recipe which stretches a pair of expensive sweet breads to four servings. Ingredients include one and one-half cups stock, salt and pepper, few drops onion juice, two eggs, teaspoon lemon juice, one-half tablespoon flour, teaspoon minced parsley, dash of ginger, one pair sweetbreads and four cream puff shells. To cook the sweetbreads, wash in cold water, cover with water to which one-half teaspoon salt and a tablespoon of lemon juice or vinegar have been added, and cook gently for 30 minutes. When done, rinse in cold water, remove membranes and cut in small pieces. Heat stock, season with salt and pepper to taste, and add onion juice. Beat eggs, add lemon juice, flour, parsley and ginger. Mix well, add to stock and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add cooked sweetbreads, heat well and serve on the cream puff shells or toast squares.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

NO TIME TO BATTLE

Those unfortunate occasions, on which you have an extreme freak, and opposite an extreme freak held by your partner, afford very poor grounds for a battle during the post-mortem. Nobody will ever find a good way to bid such hands, the result of which depends to a tremendous extent upon factors which are beyond your knowledge or control. Arguing with your partner about such deals can accomplish very little, except upsetting him or yourself.

(Dealer: North. North - South vulnerable.)

North found probably the worst possible bid with which to open this hand at one table of a duplicate game. He called 4-Spades, crowding the bidding, when it was very likely he would require all the turns he could get, if not more. Over this South bid 5-Hearts, North 5-Spades, South 6-Hearts, North 6-Spades and West doubled. It requires little imagination to see how this was slaughtered.

At another table, better bidding also got a bad result. North bid 1-Spade, South 3-Hearts, North 3-Spades, South 4-Hearts, North 5-Diamonds and South 6-Hearts. A spade was led and ruffed, a heart returned to prevent a club ruff, so that the side was down three.

One lucky South, at 6-Hearts, made his contract because a diamond was led and ruffed, trumps dropped and clubs discarded on two spades.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, Oct. 6.

ACCORDING to certain lunar and mutual configurations, there may be difficulties or disagreements with superiors, employers of those in authority on this day, but other planetary figures stimulate and stabilize the mental outlook and make safe the judgment of these matters as they arise. There might be legal phases or threatened loss of employment, but in any event there is definite promise of a welcome and lucrative change. Depend on your own insight.

Those whose birthday it is need not be surprised if some disagreeable or difficult situation arises during the year, particularly in relations with employers, superiors, authorities or perhaps partners. This may be amicably adjusted as the judgment is practical, sound and the general outlook on harassing predicaments hopeful. It may be the means of precipitating a rather unlooked-for change, journey or reorganization of the affairs, and this is a welcome and promising way out.

A child born on this day may have original talents, with good judgment and practical ideas of steadfastness and responsibility.

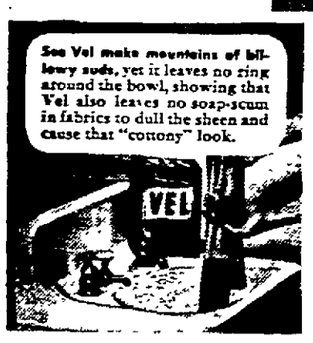
A SERIOUS CAUSE of faded stockings now found to be the alkali in soap suds. So suds your stockings with Vel, marvelous new hard-water suds made by Colgate for fine fabrics. Vel is not a soap. Contains no alkali to fade the delicate color of stockings. Makes big suds in cold water, thus ideal for all fine fabrics.



See Vel make mountains of billowy suds, yet it leaves no ring around the bowl, showing that Vel also leaves no soap-scum in fabrics to dull the sheen and cause that "cottony" look.
VEL

Ideal for all fine fabrics because Vel washes things cleaner and newer looking. Thus they last longer and keep their silky luster.

NOW see stockings keep their delicate sheerness and fresh color, amazingly longer. See woolens and underwear regain bride-like freshness and color! Colored prints sing with radiant sparkle!

Results are startling because science has found a way to make a wonderful new suds, called Vel, that contains no alkali to fade colors. And Vel can't form ruinous soap-scum to cause that "cottony" look in fine fabrics.

You can feel this slippery, slimy scum in soap suds. But these amazing new Vel suds feel soft and pure.

That's because Vel is not a soap. It's a special new hard-water suds perfected by Colgate. It makes as much as 5 times more suds than expensive soap flakes in hardest water. And it makes hardest water act soft as rainwater.

Moreover Vel makes abundant suds in cold water—so Vel is ideal for fine fabrics.

You can see why Vel is better than the finest soap-flakes for fine fabrics, because Vel does not form a ring of soap-scum around the bowl. That proves Vel can't leave ruinous soap-scum in your stockings, underwear and woolens, to give dainty things that "cottony" look, and because Vel contains no alkali, it helps colors keep fresh much longer.

So easy on hands, too, because Vel is neutral—contains no acid, no alkali to irritate the skin.

It even outlasts pure soap 2 to 1 in hardest water! Buy Vel today at grocers. Made and guaranteed by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company.

MISS HOUT WILL BE BRIDE OF MR. BISEL

Date of Marriage Announced as Nov. 5 at Party Given by Bride-Elect's Mother, Sisters at Family Residence.

AUTUMNAL DAYS bring exciting news of recent marriages and weddings to come, and this morning word comes of the first nuptial event scheduled in November. A bride's book was made by the 18 guests, and a long cord led Miss Hout to a table on which a shower of miscellaneous gifts from the guests and an electrical gift from the three hostesses were arranged.

Pastel shades decorated the refreshment table, and a profusion of fall flowers were used in the Hout home on Blymyer avenue. The announcement was found on small scrolls inserted in capsules which were hidden in the candy dishes.

CONVICTS FIRST IN PROFESSOR'S STUDY RANKING

Lecturing Psychologist Prefers Prison to College But 'Are Alike in Many Ways.'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —(U.P.)—Psychology Prof. Henry N. Peters worked with college students for seven years and convicts for seven months and concluded "surprisingly enough, a university and a penitentiary are alike in many ways."

"In both places," he said, "I've found men who are just 'doing time.' In the university the time is usually just four years and some students do their time and nothing else. In prisons the sentences vary, but the attitude of many men is the same as that of the time-doing college students."

Peters, on leave of absence from the University of Missouri, is organizing a convict classification system for the Missouri state penitentiary.

Prison Lectures Preferred.

"Frankly," he said, "I'd rather address convicts than university students. Not long ago I spoke to a group of 2,000 convicts — you could have heard a pin drop in the auditorium. On the other hand, take a class of 200 college students and—well, you know."

He said he was "amazed" by the general thirst for learning among convicts. Many take mail courses in college subjects: nearly all of the 4,300 prisoners spend much of their time reading.

"Do you know," Peters said, "that on the average convicts read more than any other group with the exception of teachers?"

Unlike college students, who sometimes label a good student a "grind," convicts respect the fellow-prisoner who is well read or versed in many subjects.

"Of course," he continued, "we have 'apple-polishers' in prison as well as in the university, but in neither place does the 'apple polisher' get very far with his tactics."

Some Convicts Mentally Alert.

Peters said that the average college student had higher intelligence than the average convict because the colleges are open only to a select group. However, he said he found many convicts whose intelligence quotient was as high as most college students.

"This fact of a lower average intelligence and the submissive personality adopted by convicts after time in the penitentiary are the chief differences between the university and penitentiary," he said.

"Students know their professors can do little to punish their breaking of rules. Convicts know they are better off doing what they are told, and this is reflected in their generally mild, passive and restrained attitudes."

He asserted that this "institutional" attitude was sometimes found among university students as well as penitentiary inmates.

61 To Get Final Citizen Papers at Reception Tonight

Sixty-one new citizens of Mansfield and Richland county will receive their citizenship papers at a reception for them tonight at the American Legion home on Park avenue west.

Sponsored by the American Legion auxiliary, the program will include talks by Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch and Mrs. W. L. Beckley, past department president of the Legion auxiliary.

The program will open at 8 p. m. with Mrs. H. D. Moorhead, president of the Mansfield auxiliary, in charge.

Naturalization papers will be presented to the new citizens by Fred R. Zellner, county clerk of courts, whose department is in charge of naturalization in the county.

Members of the class of new citizens are foreign-born residents who passed their citizenship test last week at the courthouse. They were awarded citizenship by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston following hearings in his court.

After a Month of War

(By The AP Feature Service)

The wars that started in the summers of 1914 and 1939 had certain points in common during their first month: the principal opponents, the fact that Italy stayed out, the fact that Germany fought on two fronts. But in many other respects the first month of war this time was far different from that 25 years ago. These maps give you a quick comparison.

Book of the Week

"NEWS IS WHERE YOU FIND IT," by Frederic William Wile; (Bobbs-Merrill: $3.75

* * *

FREDERIC WILLAM WILE has produced a somewhat different sort of foreign correspondent book—he has done what amounts to an autobiography, and not confined himself to his years abroad.

Mr. Wile is, as a good many may know already, the product of what he calls the invincibly literary atmosphere of Indiana, of La Porte, to be exact. There his father was a small town banker of the old school, a phenomenon almost lost in these odd days.

There also he grew up in a strongly Jewish atmosphere, but on terms of deep friendship with the other sects of the town. Wile's father had done a good turn for a certain Catholic priest, so the Wile children all went to Notre Dame, or to the affiliated girls' school, a sufficient testimony of the effectiveness of the melting pot at one point in its use.

Our author stopped briefly in a bank, and after his fling at clerking and stenography became a reporter on the old Chicago Record. It was not his first venture in journalism, however, because for a long while he wrote, edited and printed a family journal that was (in the family) a pretty successful venture. Some copies are preserved today.

Wile's first big news job was to report McKinley's visit to Chicago. This was his first President, and that in a day when the President was not dropping into every radio-equipped home every month or so. Presently he was in London watching Queen Victoria's reign slip into the past to the accompaniment of the distant roaring of the Boer war in South Africa.

But most of Mr. Wile's service abroad was in Germany, where he became one of the aces, serving several American papers and later Lord Northcliffe's Daily Mail.

Nothing could be more effective at exactly this moment than Wile's story of the way in which the Germany of William II forced Austria to bridle at Serbia's capitulation, in that dread summer of 1914, after Austria had accepted the terms of the Serbian note.

Mr. Wile was close to the strong, though secret, pulse of the German war machine, and was one of those bitter correspondents who wrote story after story about the danger of war, only to have them pitched into the editorial wastebasket.

There is much more. Wile went again to England, returned to America after service with Pershing in France and the triumphal European tour of the late Woodrow Wilson. He has served since in Washington, upon which scene his comment is as pungent as upon the earlier, more romantic ones.—By J. S.

UNUSUAL STRIKE VEXES SCHOOL

PASCOAG, R. I.— (U.P.) — The school department was thrown into confusion by an unusual strike.

Joseph Fortin struck when the department refused to pay him more than $5 weekly for transporting his own child to school. He had received $10 weekly for transporting six children to school, but five outgrew the school and only Fortin's child was left.

FEWER TRAILERS NOTED IN PARK

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo. —(U.P.)—People no longer are dragging their homes behind them when they come to visit scenic Yellowstone National Park.

The forest service said today only 1.43 per cent of the cars entering the park this year pulled trailers, compared with 1.79 per cent in the peak year of 1937.

Early season visitors showed more of a tendency to live in trailers than those who came later in the season, the report said.

ELEMENTS SCAR EARLY MISSION

Need Funds to Rebuild Church Erected in 1783; Storms Damage Structure.

TUCSON, Ariz. —(U.P.)— Unless funds are forthcoming for a complete rebuilding program, historic mission San Xavier del Bac, said to be one of the oldest missions in either California or Arizona, faces destruction by the elements, according to Father Mark Boucher, O. F. M., pastor of the church.

Located nine miles from Tucson, the mission was built in 1783 by the Jesuits. It has been partly restored several times, but storms during the last few years have so damaged the structure that a complete rebuilding program is necessary, Father Bucher said.

A recent electrical storm, described by Papago Indians living on the San Xavier reservation as the worst in their memory, destroyed nearly all the cupola on the west tower and knocked a massive iron cross to the courtyard in front of the church.

One bolt, Father Bucher said, smashed into the west side of the mission and demolished several feet of plaster. It continued along a wall and bored a three-inch hole in a flight of stairs.

Another bolt jumped to the choir loft roof and spread over most of the building, the priest said, but did not damage the decorations and murals on the altar.

Sudden dust and high wind storms, as well as lightning, have buffeted the mission so severely, Father Bucher reported, that few portions of the structure, with the exception of the murals and decorations near the altar, have escaped.

The aged adobe walls of the mission have been cracked and defaced. Many of the windows are broken.
